MARLBORO FIRE RAZES BUILDING, PERILING TOWN

Apparatus Is Summoned From Miles About to Fight Flames.

RESIDENTS FORCED TO MOVE BELONGINGS

Discovery Made by Woman; Old Department Store Is Destroyed.

Upper Marlboro, Md., was threatened by fire which broke out in the main business section early today. Fire departments from all nearby places were called to battle the flames.

The blaze started in the old J. Fisher department store, now used as a warehouse, and spread to the Farmers' & Merchants' Bank and the new building now occupied by the Fisher store. For a time the entire business section was threatened. Persons living on the side of the street for two blocks moved their belongings to the street.

The old Fisher building, a 3-story frame structure, was burned to the ground. The fire quickly spread to the bank, where it was confined to the directors' and tellers' room. The heat of the flames broke all the windows in the building, and a guard of county police were placed on duty there for the night.

Girl Discovers Blaze.

Catherine Duvall, living nearby, discovered the fire and called the telephone operator who immediately called all the fire apparatus from LaPlata, Bladensburg, Cottage City, Hyattsville, Mount Rainier, Glenndale, Greater Capitol Heights and Boulevard Heights, as well as the Marlboro companies.

The new Bladensburg rescue ambulance was called to the scene, and treated one fireman who was cut in fighting the blaze.

New Store Damaged.

The new home of the Fisher department store was damaged on one side, but the damage to the stock was thought to be small.

Telephones on the western part of the town were put out of commission, and communication from the outside was virtually cut off. The chief operator answered calls, but merely stated that the telephones in the town were out of order and the business section was being swept by flames.

66 Liquor Vessels Off U. S. Coast

Coast Guard Sets Out to Stem Invasion, Laid to Wet Agitation.

Boston, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—The Coast Guard put to sea today to intercept one of the greatest rumrunning invasions ever attempted in the history of prohibition.

Coast Guard headquarters was aware of the presence of 66 liquor-laden craft off the New England Coast and southward to Cape May, N. J., and there was good reason to believe other contraband-carrying vessels soon would join the fleet.

All the liquor-laden fleet was said to be well outside the 12-mile limit and it was to keep it there that five destroyers and nine 125-foot offshore patrol boats left this port alone today. Other Government craft will hasten to join the blockade from other points along the coast.

Campbell Asks Furlough's End As Boylan Vows to Fight Cuts

House Expected to Pass Revised Economy Bill Today.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

Over the opposition of a militant minority, the House today is expected to approve for another year revised but far-reaching provisions of the economy act.

Furlough provisions, the last items in the lengthy Treasury-Postoffice appropriations bill, probably will reach a vote late this afternoon. A barrage of amendments designed to ameliorate economy hardships await consideration of this phase of the bill.

Earlier today Senator Hiram Bingham's senate economy committee will meet to draft a plan of its own for coping with the economy act sections. Friends of the furlough are about evenly divided on the committee with advocates of a flat pay cut substitute.

Developments yesterday were:

1. Thomas E. Campbell, president of the Civil Service Commission, asked the Senate economy committee to throw the "legislative" furlough out of the bill, pointing out that economies can best be effected by appropriations cuts.

2. Representative James M. Mead (Democrat), New York, said the full strength of his postoffice committee will support five economy act amendments he will offer as an outgrowth of the committee's special study of economy burdens.

3. Representative Fiorello H. LaGuardia (Republican), New York, leader of the furlough opposition forces, said he will concentrate his efforts on defeating section 5 of the

REP. JOHN J. BOYLAN.

New Yorker Says U. S. Workers Should Be Aggressive.

Government workers were assured last night by Representative John Boylan (Democrat), New York, that "over our dead bodies will they tack anything onto" the furlough plan now limiting Federal salary scales.

The declaration was made before the assembled delgates from Government offices here of the various lodges of the American Federation of Government Employes, American Federation of Labor affiliated organization, meeting in the Hamilton Hotel.

Boylan, leader of the powerful Democratic New York delegation in Congress, promised that he would fight to the bitter end against continuance of the furlough plan and said that he believed President-elect Roosevelt, when inducted into office next March 4, will "lend a friendly ear to Government employes working so faithfully in the Federal Service."

He also criticized "inequality" of the retirement fund deductions from the pay checks of Government workers.

Boylan urged Government employes

PHYSICIAN TO GIANTS SHOT; GUNMAN SLAIN

Office Attack, Followed by Street Battle, Linked to Mysterious Call.

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Dr. William J. Walsh, 41, physician to the New York Giants Baseball Club and an honorary police department surgeon, was shot and seriously wounded in his office tonight.

His assailant, a young man tentatively identified as John William Wilson, was slain by police after a short chase.

Dr. Walsh had asked last night that two policemen be posted on guard duty after receiving a telephone call from Wilson.

At that time, police learned, Wilson told the surgeon his brother was seriously ill and that he would bring him to the office. Dr. Walsh said he preferred to visit Wilson's home if it was a serious case, but the youth persisted.

Fearing his prospective patient might be a wounded gangster, Dr. Walsh asked for the two police guards. He waited with them for Wilson and his brother, but they did not appear.

Tonight Wilson burst into the office, brushed past a nurse and entered the physician's private office. Three shots followed almost at once and the young assailant ran out.

George F. Murphy, an insurance broker and friend of the physician, who had been waiting in the X-ray room, grabbed a revolver from Dr. Walsh's desk and gave chase.

The documents were submitted to the foreign office in order that the translation might be authenticated by the official translator. Immediately after this approval, the extradition petition will be submitted.

Guggenheim Scion In Bad Check Net

Cigarette Girl Says 'Waiter' Promised to Make Her a Texas Guinan.

Los Angeles, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Check troubles descended today on Albert J. Guggenheim, young scion of a wealthy New York family, who has been working in Hollywood as a waiter. One complaint accused him of inducing Sally Arnold, pretty cigarette girl, in a cafe, to sign a $290 check drawn on a bank in which he had no funds.

She told the district attorney's office Guggenheim promised to make her "the Texas Guinan of the West," and thus won her confidence. Two other counts charged Guggenheim gave two worthless checks, one for $40 and the other for $15, to Terry Meyers, parking lot operator.

Found working in a Hollywood night club, Guggenheim recently said he had been cut off from family funds and had no other way of earning a living.

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Just before boarding the Berengaria tonight to return to her adopted land, Lady Nancy Astor made the only comment of her visit on prohibition.

Sandwiched in the midst of an appeal for an Anglo-American Union to "make Democracy safe for the world," were these remarks:

P. U. C. AND GAS FIRM ACCORD SEEN NEAR

Wrangle Over Ownership Is Due to Be Settled Out of Court Shortly.

An agreement between counsel for the Public Utilities Commission and attorneys of the Washington Gas Light Co. and its owners, whereby the long-standing ownership wrangle will be settled amicably out of court, was believed to be near yesterday as William A. Roberts, special counsel for the commission, resumed his conferences with Arthur Dean, counsel for the Chase National Bank interests, and Wilton J. Lambert attorney for the local gas company.

While all parties declined to discuss the pending negotiations because of their immaturity, there were indications that the gas company and its foreign owners may submit very shortly in writing an explanation of the ownership structure which will be recommended to the commission by Mr. Roberts for approval.

The frequently postponed meeting of stockholders of the Washington Gas Light Co. is scheduled for today; but, unless an agreement is reached beforehand between the commission

Il Duce Hints at Trade Reprisals in Jugoslavia

Rome, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Commercial reprisals for acts of "anti-Italian vandalism" in Trau and other Jugoslavian cities were intimated today by Premier Mussolini in a reply in the Senate to an interpellation presented by a number of leading senators.

"Jugoslavia had better not forget that her commercial relations with Italy constitute the most important point of her exports," the premier said.

Crowds Jam Courthouse At Guy's Arraignment

Long Beach, Calif., Dec. 14 (A.P.).—William James (Curly) Guy, 24-year-old Welsh adventurer, faced a crowded courtroom today for arraignment on charges of killing Capt. Walter Wanderwell, 35, noted globe trotter. Preliminary hearing was set for Monday.

Scores of spectators jammed into Municipal Judge Charles F. Cook's courtroom for a glimpse of Guy, charged with shooting Wanderwell the night of December 5 aboard his yacht, Carma, on the eve of his departure on another world cruise.

HOOVER'S BEER VIEW WITHHELD BY MILLS

Demands Sales Tax as Body in House Prepares Bill to Alter Dry Law.

(Associated Press.)

Denied the administration's official views on beer and confronted by Secretary Mills' demand for a sales tax to balance the budget, the House ways and means committee prepared yesterday to formulate a bill to modify the Volstead law.

Repeated efforts by committee members to extract from the Cabinet officer any indication as to whether President Hoover would sign a bill to legalize beer ended futilely in the most spectacular and heated session of a full week of hearings on the Democratic revenue proposal.

Drawing freely upon his oratorical ability, Mills declared the beer measure, if enacted, would not alone balance the budget and estimated revenue from it would be between $125,000,000 and $150,000,000 the first year, as compared with estimates of other witnesses that it would exceed $200,000,000.

Surrounded by the biggest crowd that has jammed into the huge committee room at these hearings and, with the beams of flood lights set up by camera men shining in his ruddy face, the Treasury chieftain pleaded for enactment at this session of a "nonpartisan" program to provide enough revenue to meet Federal expenditures.

"The time has come to bring the Federal budget into balance in the sense that there will be no further increase in the public debt," Mills said in asserting that a general sales levy was the only means of accom-

Whitehill Last of 4 Players Obtained by Nats in Trades

Deal With Tigers Sends Marberry to Detroit; Goslin, Schulte, Stewart Gained for West, Reynolds, Brown.

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Dec. 14.—The Washington Ball Club late tonight capped a day of prolific trading by negotiating a deal with the Detroit Tigers that sends Pitcher Fred Marberry to Detroit in exchange for Earl Whitehill, left-handed hurler.

The Washington-Detroit trade was consummated only a few hours after major league trade winds had blown into a veritable gale, that saw the Nats deposit Outfielders Carl Reynols and Sam West and Pitcher Lloyd Brown on the roster of the St. Louis Browns in a transaction that brought Outfielders Goose Goslin and Fred Schulte and Pitcher Walter Stewart to Washington.

To bind the bargain with St. Louis in the exchange that involves six players, all regulars and vital cogs in the 1931 machines of both clubs, President Griffith of the Nats tossed in a bundle of cash of an unspecified amount.

The deal with the Tigers for Whitehill, which severed Fred Marberry's nine-year affiliation with the Washington club, was an outright swap and represented a concession by Griffith to his youthful manager, Joe Cronin, who instigated the trade in an effort to add another left-handed pitcher to his staff.

The Washington club stole the trading thunder of the annual league meeting with its two transactions involving eight players, but there were indications that President Griffith had not yet finished his work of remodeling the Nats' line-up.

Griffith admitted tonight that a deal with the Cleveland Indians was still hanging fire. The Nats' owner

WHITE HOUSE GUARD READY FOR VETERANS

Extra Details of Police Added After Tip on Surprise Visit.

DEMAND FOR BONUS IS MADE AT CAPITOL

Curtis Clashes With March Leaders Over Criticism of President.

Extra details of police guarded the White House last night to repel a threatened demonstration by the organization of veterans which yesterday presented petitions to Vice President Curtis and Speaker Garner, calling for cash payment of the bonus.

Through special operatives that have been in touch with aims of the veterans, Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown learned that the veterans planned a surprise demonstration at the Executive Mansion for last night or today.

To forestall any illegal gatherings he detailed squads of police, who were hidden in the east wing of the Executive Mansion. There were a few policemen stationed at the corners to prevent any gatherings of the veterans.

Police Work in Shifts.

The squads of Metropolitan police were relieved last midnight by a force of United States Park Police, who remained on duty throughout the night. They were to be relieved at 8 o'clock this morning by forces of the Metropolitan Department.

White House police, at midnight, reported that there had been no attempt to stage any demonstrative activities, but there were ample guards on duty to quell anything of that nature.

Sharp words were exchanged by Vice President Curtis and a committee of the veterans, because a petition they presented condemned President Hoover for calling on troops to evict the bonus army. The Vice President refused to present their petition to the Senate until the paragraph which attacked President Hoover had been deleted.

Call on Garner.

Meanwhile, another committee, headed by James W. Ford, colored vice presidential candidate on the Communist ticket in the last election, visited Speaker Garner and read to him their petition. He made no objections to the part which criticized the Chief Executive.

"You can go to the devil," Vice President Curtis told one of the committee, who refused to shake hands with him.

The Vice President received the committee courteously. Samuel J.

Defending his country's action against China and the invasion of Manchuria, Dr. Notobe said the League of Nations did not fully understand the "background" to the Oriental problem and therefore could not give justice in its rulings.

PARIS DEBT DEFAULT MAY BLOCK REVISION; ACTION RAPPED HERE

Paris Step Called Ungrateful and Not Wise.

SECURITIES BAN SOUGHT

Members' Sentiment Is Climaxed by Resolution.

(Associated Press.)

A chorus of denunciation and a threat of punitive action issued from Congress yesterday in response to the French Parliament's decision not to pay its war debt installment.

Senators and representatives in quick succession gave vent to their feelings with remarks about ingratitude and lack of wisdom on the part of France. This sentiment was climaxed late in the day by action.

Representative Knutson (Republican), Minnesota, put before the House a resolution which would forbid entry into the United States of securities issued by governments that have defaulted on their debt payments, prohibit their advertisement for sale, and bar the securities from the mails.

Indications were lacking as to whether this or any similar proposal would be advanced any further.

At the State Department Secretary Stimson discussed Belgium's decision not to pay the $2,125,000 due today, with that country's ambassador, Paul May. What Stimson told him was not disclosed.

Recalls War Lending.

The sharp congressional comment on France's stand included the remark of Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, that "I think it is the most ungrateful act in the career of any nation in the world."

Chairman McReynolds, of the House foreign affairs committee, said: "France has less excuse not to pay than any other nation."

Senator Bingham (Republican), Connecticut, remarked: "They forget that had we been unwilling to lend them the money they needed when they needed it and on reasonable terms, the result would have been fatal to France."

Representative Stevenson (Democrat), South Carolina, important on the House banking committee: "I don't see anything we can do but stand pat, and when they want more money, say: 'Well, your paper is no good, you've defaulted in the past. Now borrow your money from Poland or somebody.'"

Foresees French Regret.

A Democratic Senate leader who refused to have his name used: "The result will be so embarrassing to France that she will regret having pursued that course."

Senator Harrison, ranking Democrat on the Senate finance committee, said: "France's attitude is incomprehensible to me."

Senator Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, said: "The American Government would do well to pattern its course after that employed by Andrew Jackson at the time the French

U. S. and Russian Views On Orient Issue Sought

Geneva, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—A resolution inviting the United States and the Soviet government to participate in the process of conciliation of the Sino-Japanese dispute will not be adopted by the drafting subcommittee of the League of Nations assembly's committee of nineteen until after the Washington State Department and Moscow have had a chance to make suggestions, British sources revealed tonight.

The big powers agreed that they want no delay, but they will not sponsor a resolution which would prevent the United States and Soviet Russia from airing their views as to how conciliation should be achieved. The drafting committee announced it had completed a tentative text of the resolution.

Debt Developments

Great Britain, the United States' largest European debtor, will pay in gold its debt installment due today. Italy already has paid and Czechoslovakia and Latvia will do so.

France and Belgium both will default, and Poland probably will do likewise, a statement issued last night by the Polish Embassy expressing regret that Poland and this country have failed to reach a solution of the question.

In Paris Premier Herriot, whose government was overthrown yesterday morning, carried on as head of the government, but without authority to make any payment to America.

Lloyd George, in the British Commons, demanded that Britain cease her payments.

Count de Broqueville was attempting to form a new Belgian government, following the resignation of the cabinet after refusing to pay the United States.

RELIEF BILL PLANS END OF FARM BOARD

Department of Agriculture Would Administer New Allotment Program.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Abolition of the Federal Farm Board is tentatively provided for in the new farm relief bill now being drawn by Chairman Jones of the House agricultural committee, it was disclosed yesterday in hearings on the domestic allotment plan.

Under the program agreed upon by the Democratic majority of the committee, which is supported by some of the Republican members, the allotment plan would be administered by the Department of Agriculture and all permanent functions of the Farm Board transferred back to that agency.

Chairman Jones said last night he planned to conclude hearings on the bill this week and expressed the belief that Democratic Leader Rainey would provide for prompt consideration of the measure on the floor.

As now framed, the measure would place a processing tax on domestic consumption of the principal American agricultural products—wheat, cotton, tobacco and hogs—the proceeds of which would be passed back to the producers as a bounty for their voluntary acceptance of acreage curtailment.

President-elect Roosevelt has indorsed the plan and has informed Democratic leaders in both the House and Senate that he is desirous of legislation at this session which would apply to the 1933 crops.

Gaining new supporters almost daily since the session began, the do-

20-Foot Octopus Scare Disturbs Maui Islanders

Honolulu, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Reports a giant octopus with tentacles 20 feet long and a head three times the size of a man's had been seen dragging itself along the rocks close to shore caused fishermen on Maui Island to cast their nets with caution today.

Henry Sylva, son of a county official, reported sighting the monster, and his story was vouched for by fishermen and swimmers. Fishermen said the giant devilfish had probably been driven ashore by high winds.

Maine House Seat Impasse Unbroken

Executive Council Blocks Utterback Credentials Despite Election.

Augusta, Me., Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Maine may have only two representatives when the National House of Representatives next convenes as result of a deadlock over issuance of a certificate of election in the Third Congressional District, which continued unbroken tonight.

Democrat John G. Utterback defeated former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster, Republican, in the Third District in the September election. But Brewster contested the election, asked for a recount, and his supporters in the executive council, four out of the seven members, have blocked every attempt to declare Utterback elected.

On the other side the three anti-Brewster councilors joined by Gov. William Tudor Gardner stopped all efforts of the pro-Brewster crowd to throw out enough votes to give the election to the former governor.

U. S. Due to Wait Until Nation Sends Sum.

OTHERS' HOPE IS INCREASED

Poland Will Not Pay, Is Indication in Embassy Note.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

The United States will hold in abeyance any revision of the French war debt to the United States until payment has been made on her installment due today and defaulted by the action of the Chamber of Deputies. This was the first unofficial reaction to the news that France, for the first time in 143 years, was going to forfeit her international credit standing by withholding payment.

Negotiations for the commercial treaty between this country and France were brought to a summary standstill by the action of the French Parliament, as it is not believed that the legislatures of either country would be in a receptive mood to consider any further treaty making at the moment.

A canvass of the responsible officers of the Government yesterday revealed that the first result of the French default will be in the negotiations for debt revision that will be undertaken here shortly. President Hoover is believed to be ready to make these recommendations the subject of his message to Congress in the near future. From that discussion France will be automatically barred until the French war interest payment of $20,000,000 is deposited in the Treasury Department.

Chances Are Increased.

The payment of the British, Italian, Czech, Lithuanian and Latvian debts will enable them to benefit immediately by any initiation that may be made toward a renewed discussion of the debts. The terms of the war debt funding act are explicit and can not be altered by any agency except Congress. Since this agency will have the last word to say on any debt revision, the chances of sympathetic treatment for the other French payments have visibly diminished.

By the same process the hopes for better treatment for the paying governments have proportionately increased. In authoritative circles last night it was confidently believed that the payment of the British debt, especially in the face of the French and Belgian intransigeance, has gone a long way toward softening the attitude Congress will take when the British debt settlement comes up for revision.

The realities of the debt problem were discussed in the French Embassy last night, where the French Ambassador, Paul Claudel, and Mme.

BLANTON DEMANDS HOUSE PROTECTION

Wants Galleries Closed to "Cranks" as Result of Gun Scare.

To the accompaniment of a speech by Representative Tom Blanton (Democrat), Texas, demanding that galleries be closed to "cranks" and "anarchists," House members recovered yesterday from the scare thrown into them Tuesday by a department store clerk with a gun.

Blanton proposed that gallery admissions be only on cards issued by members, who, in turn, would be responsible for spectators they sponsor. Sergeant at Arms Kenneth Romney echoed his preference for tickets of admission.

Speaker Garner, however, considered it unlikely visitors will be barred from the galleries.

"That is something that won't happen for maybe another hundred years," he said.

Prosecution Planned.

Meantime, Sixth Precinct police were planning to hail into Police Court tomorrow Marlin Kemmerer, 25-year-old Allentown (Pa.) "dead shot," who Tuesday held up the House with a loaded Western style .38. Police said he probably will be charged with "assault with a dangerous weapon."

Representative Maas (Republican), Minnesota, who persuaded Kemmerer to give up his gun, and Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), Massachusetts, who refused to be frightened, yesterday were the subject of eulogy by Blanton and others. Representative Clarke (Republican), New York, moved that they be given congressional medals of honor, but the motion was ruled out of order.

Capitol police and doorkeepers yesterday increased their vigilance and Department of Justice operatives, in plain clothes, mixed with spectators in the galleries to guard against another disturbance in the chamber.

Card Giver Defended.

Representative Lichtenwalner (Democrat), Pennsylvania, on whose card Kemmerer was admitted to the galleries, was defended on the floor by his colleague, Representative Rich (Republican), Pennsylvania.

"No member can be responsible for everyone to whom he issues a permit," he said.

Blanton earlier had said no one "should be admitted to the gallery of this chamber unless he comes properly vouched for and with a proper purpose."

"Our people back home are known to us in our districts," he said. "They should have a card from us when they enter that gallery, and the member ought to be responsible for the proper conduct of the persons who enter the gallery on his card."

Representative Underhill (Republican), Massachusetts, asked Blanton if acts similar to the Kemmerer occurrence were not in his opinion encouraged by congressional criticism of police methods "in trying to hold in leash these irresponsible people who come seeking trouble in Washington."

Hunger Marchers Hit.

"I have never criticized good police," Blanton replied. "I think they ought to stop the cranks on the threshold of the District of Columbia and send them back."

He said if "hunger marchers" were called "anarchists" in the press "we would get a better reaction in this country."

Blanton told the House he had been put "on the spot" by the press gallery, "just like the racketeers in other places of the country have been put on the spot."

"They can never make a reference to me without trying to reflect upon me in some way," he said.

Cabinet Members Push Job Sharing

Chapin and Doak Join in Plea to Employers to Split Work.

(Associated Press.)

An effort to stimulate the "share the work" movement was initiated by Roy D. Chapin, Secretary of Commerce, and William N. Doak, Secretary of Labor, yesterday in a joint letter to 200,000 employes, asking that they cooperate.

With the communication the Secretaries inclosed a letter from Walter C. Teagle, chairman of the national share the work committee, which called attention to the success of the plan thus far and figured that 3,500,000 persons had been given employment through the movement.

The letter pointed out that as winter advances it is urgently necessary to use every effort to provide as much employment as possible. A questionnaire was inclosed, asking information on what the employers had done toward spreading employment and what they plan to do in the near future.

P. U. C. AND GAS FIRM ACCORD SEEN NEAR

and the utility, it probably will again be delayed.

The several conferences between Messrs. Roberts, Dean and Lambert have taken up in detail the various changes in the elaborate ownership structure which controls the local gas companies. Counsel for the gas companies' owners contend that the commission's order of last May has been complied with and that the case should be closed.

While the commission's special counsel admits that most of its requirements have been met, he insists on seeing the entire picture before making any recommendation to the utilities body.

The major ills of the original ownership set-up are said to have been eliminated, such as the payment of large fees by the local companies for managerial services of the Central Public Service Corporation.

Numerous reorganizations have been effected also, so that Mr. Dean and Mr. Lambert contend that the commission's order has been obeyed. This would mean that not more than 80 per cent of the capital stock of the gas companies is in the hands of a foreign public utility corporation or a holding corporation. It may, however, be in the hands of other outside interests.

The Washington Gas Light Co. is eager to get the whole affair settled in order to issue some new bonds, while the commission would be glad enough to avoid any further prolonged litigation, particularly in view of the wobbly nature of the La Follette act.

Any agreement that is reached is likely to be put through within the next few weeks or maybe days.

Jackson War Threat to Get France to Pay Debt Is Cited

President Even Went So Far as to Prepare Declaration, Senator Steiwer Recalls; Feels Insistence of Nation at That Time Was Commendable.

(Associated Press.)

The course followed by Andrew Jackson in collecting a debt from France was cited yesterday by Senator Steiwer, Oregon Republican, as one the United States would "do well" to follow now.

Senator Steiwer emphasized that he was not proposing the United States should go to war to collect the debt, as threatened by Jackson, but said he felt the "dignity and severe insistence" of the Nation at that time was commendable.

"The attitude which our Government then took was wholly in keeping with the sanctity of an international obligation," he said. "European powers now are treating very lightly obligations which at one time in history were treated most as binding."

Refreshing his memory with the aid of history books, the Western senator vividly told the story of Jackson's successful battle to collect a debt from France growing out of the payment of indemnities for losses by American vessels during the Napoleonic wars.

"The French owed us money and wouldn't pay," he said. "Jackson negotiated a treaty in which they agreed to pay $5,000,000 in six annual installments. We agreed in exchange to reduce the duties on French wines.

"We reduced the duties, but the French did not pay much attention to the matter, and two sessions of the French Congress failed to make the appropriation.

"Livingstone, then Secretary of State, was sent to the French court to collect the debt. The feeling between this country and France became serious, and the people began to talk about war.

"Jackson said he was ready for the hazard of war. He said the honor of the Nation was at stake. It went so far that Jackson prepared a declaration of war. That, however, was never employed.

"He insisted they keep their contract, and stood his ground until they paid."

Steiwer read from Jackson's messages to Congress in connection with the dispute, in which "Old Hickory" used strong language to describe the French attitude. He said their position was "utterly untenable," and said they were refusing to keep obligations "held sacred by the whole civilized world."

PARIS DEFAULT SEEN HURTING NATION'S CHANCE OF REVISION

Claudel entertained the American Secretary of State and Mrs. Stimson. Earlier in the evening the ambassador had made an appointment with the Secretary to convey to him the formal announcement that in view of the attitude of the French Parliament the French government would be unable to meet its debt payment to the United States on the date due. This was canceled at the last moment, however.

Belgian Announcement.

The Belgian Ambassador, suave, dapper and moustached, called at the Department of State yesterday and deposited with the Secretary the formal announcement of the Belgian default.

The Belgian note called attention to the fact that "capacity to pay" as specified by the United States does not "imply the obligation to pay to the full limit of present or future capacity."

Nevertheless, Belgium is disposed to collaborate fully in "seeking a general settlement of intergovernmental debts and of other problems arising from the depression."

Such also was the tenor of the French message which Ambassador Claudel had intended to deliver at the Secretary's home earlier in the evening.

Default by Poland Indicated.

Default by Poland of her war debt payment of $3,302,980 due today was indicated last night in a statement issued at the Polish Embassy expressing regret that no solution of the question satisfactory to both governments had been reached.

The statement did not specifically state Poland would be unable to make payments, but embassy attaches interpreted it in that manner.

The statement said the Polish government had requested that the Polish debt be placed before the American Congress, and added:

"At the same time (the Polish government) intimated to the Government of the United States that failing congressional action, the only method of payment available to the Polish government was to tender notes for the total sum due December 15.

"The Government of the United States has not found it possible to submit the matter of the Polish debt to the Congress before December 15. At the same time, the Polish Embassy was informed that the United States Treasury is legally prevented from considering any other method of payment except in United States dollars, payable in New York.

"The Polish government profoundly regrets that it has been impossible to find a solution satisfactory to both governments."

Speculation on Bonds.

Financial circles were speculating last night on the fate of the $3,863,650,000 worth of French bonds which are still kept in the United States Treasury as a result of the funding of the French debt. These bonds are not at the present time negotiable except by act of Congress. If Congress so decides, the terms of the act provide that they must first be offered to the French Government, in order to prevent the chaotic conditions in the stock market that would follow the dumping of such a volume of securities on the money markets.

The action of the French Parliament has automatically deprived these bonds of their par value and since they can not be disposed of, except at par, the Treasury is placed in the position of holding as assets depreciated bonds of the French government. In the present temper of Congress, it was feared that a move might be started to bring about the immediate commercialization of these securities, which would undoubtedly depress all French securities held both here and abroad.

The possibility of such a maneuver yesterday is believed to have been responsible for the depression in all French securities on the exchanges of the principal cities. French government securities sold off many points and gilt-edged Government obligations experienced heavy selling. There are approximately $400,000,000 French government bonds now in the hands of American investors and probably many more of French industrial and commercial securities.

Default Puts Claudel In Embarrassing Spot

Poet-Ambassador Paul Claudel has been placed in an embarrassing position by the default of his government on the payment of its war debt to the United States. Last night he was host at a formal dinner in honor of Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and tonight he will officiate at the White House diplomatic reception as dean of the Corps of Diplomats.

The French Ambassador will be the cynosure of all eyes at the White House tonight, as it is the first time he has been dean of the corps in his four and a half years' residence. In addition to that fact, his country was to have paid her war debt to the Treasury today and has defaulted instead.

Herriot Notifies U. S. His Debt Work Is Over

Paris, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Premier Herriot notified Washington today that as a result of the fall of his ministry he no longer was qualified to carry on negotiations regarding the $19,261,432.50 war debt interest payment due the United States tomorrow.

With the Herriot cabinet merely carrying on current affairs until a new cabinet has been installed there is no power at present authorized to take any action regarding the payment.

Meanwhile President Albert Lebrun is seeking a new ministry, which, in addition to heavy domestic problems, is faced with the delicate question of France's future debt relations with the United States.

Official circles doubted whether there would be any further action by M. Herriot, as he was leaving the next steps to the new government.

The press generally expresses concern about the future relations with the United States as well as what England now will do about the Lausanne accord.

5 Nations Frame New Chaco Notes

Aid of 14 Other American Countries for Peace Is Sought.

(United Press.)

A new major proposal for settlement of the Bolivian-Paraguayan Chaco dispute, framed by representatives of Colombia, Mexico, Uruguay, Cuba and the United States, will be sent today to fourteen other American republics, it was learned last night.

This action, encompassing the entire continent, will be simultaneous with dispatching of identic notes to Bolivia and Paraguay seeking a solution of their difficulties that have resulted in months of bloody, undeclared war in the disputed Chaco.

The notes to Bolivia and Paraguay were drafted during a four-hour session of the neutrals, commissions here late yesterday. The texts of the notes will be published here today upon receipt of assurances that they have been received by the foreign offices of the two nations involved. The notes to the other nations will invite common support of all American republics of a new settlement of the Chaco dispute. They will endeavor to mobilize Pan-American sentiment behind a peaceful settlement.

Two Get Death in Bride's Murder.

Sulphur, Okla., Dec. 14 (A.P.).—The death penalty was assessed today against Clude Oliver, 28, and his nephew, George Oliver, 18, after both had pleaded guilty to charges of murdering Claude's girl bride in a plot to collect insurance.

U. S. Aid Sought To Save Beaches

Association Would Boost Funds of States and Municipalities.

Federal aid for States and municipalities in the protection of beaches and shores against erosion and other destructive elements was advocated yesterday at the first session of the annual meeting of the American Shore and Beach Preservation Association at the National Research Council Building.

The association indorsed the plan, after a bill introduced to Congress and which will be heard by the rivers and harbors committee of the House of Representatives, was outlined to them.

Under the proposed legislation the Government would assume 50 per cent of the expense involved in the construction of jetties, bulkheads and other protective devices.

Baltimore Man Seeks District Committee Job

(Associated Press.)

Representative Kennedy, of Baltimore, new member of the Maryland House delegation, asked yesterday for assignments to the District of Columbia, public buildings and grounds, claims and war claims committees of the House.

"My request is in accordance with suggestions made by Democratic leaders," Kennedy said. "They probably figured my experience as a councilman in Baltimore qualified me for the District committee."

ENGLAND WILL PAY U. S. IN GOLD TODAY

Statement of Chamberlain Is Greeted With Cheers in Commons.

London, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Britain makes its mid-December $95,550,000 war debt payment to the United States in gold tomorrow.

Cheers greeted a statement by Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain today, at the outset of the House of Commons debate on war debts, that Britain was sticking to the letter of its bond, although with full intention to press for a more favorable settlement of the tremendous problem.

Throughout the long seven-hour debate which followed, hardly a voice was raised in opposition to payment. Although the debate was stage-managed so that no vote of any character was taken, it was doubtful if a division would have shown more than a few scattered votes in opposition.

There was criticism of the government's course aplenty, however, but the criticism mainly was of the method employed in the negotiations for postponement and of the Lausanne bargains, which sheared Britain of the income from her own debtors without assurance of relief from her creditor.

Cites Lausanne Action.

Mr. Chamberlain informed the House that the action of the European nations at Lausanne was taken with the cognizance and approval of the United States. After mentioning the joint communique issued in Washington when former Premier Laval of France visited President Hoover in 1931, the chancellor of the exchequer said:

"The United States Government indicated also to our arbassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, that if the European powers devised a reasonable reparations settlement, this would be the best method of approach with a view to revision of the war debts due the United States.

"That is an important matter because it is justification of the statement in the recent British note that the initiative taken by the European powers at Lausanne was taken with the cognizance and approval of the United States."

Winston Churchill was caustic.

Conduct Is Attacked.

"I think it would tax the resources of my vocabulary to do justice to the series of wrong terms which I venture to think have characterized the government's conduct of this grave matter," he said.

David Lloyd George, Liberal leader, spoke of "the mother of Parliaments gibbering away" on unimportant matters while millions of her gold were taken to another land. Emphasizing that he was against default, he declared that had he controlled events and America had refused to discuss a new settlement before demanding resumption of payments, he would have done as the French Parliament had done—he would have said "No parley, no pay."

Mr. Churchill's most searing words were reserved for the part Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald had played in linking Britain's case to that of France.

"To be forced to link our case with France would be disaster," he said, "but to want to do it was the acme of ineptitude and the quintescence of maladdress."

5 Directors Supported By Warners Are Elected

Wilmington, Del., Dec. 14 (A.P.).—All five directors supported by the management of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., were elected tonight as a climax to the prolonged annual meeting of the company. The session began Monday morning.

CONGRESS MEMBERS HIT FRENCH DEFAULT

government threatened to default before."

Senator Keyes (Republican), New Hampshire: "I am rather surprised and naturally disappointed."

Commenting upon the French position, Representative Britten (Republican), Illinois, said: "The refusal of France to pay her honorable debts to the United States at a time when her ability to pay is unquestioned can only be regarded as an expression of French hatred toward the United States and the things we stand for."

Urges Nonrecognition.

"The American public will now realize that the secret Anglo-French agreement to destroy our cruiser equality with England, and the subsequent raid upon our gold reserve, were deliberate attempts at the destruction of our world position.

"France has now aligned herself with Soviet Russia as an irresponsible nation, and as such should be treated accordingly."

Senator McNary, assistant Republican leader, expressed surprise at the French decision, adding:

"I can't foresee what we may be up against."

Among those who said their say to newspapermen was Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, who observed that Premier Herriot's "willingness to be thrown out of office for the honor of his country and welfare of his people gives him a unique place in current history."

Senator Watson, the Republican leader, said: "The conduct of France is wholly unjustified. * * * If it were not for American men and money there would be no France."

Declared Ridiculous.

Senator Johnson (Republican), California, said: "The action of France is * * * ridiculous. * * * The whole present muddle is due to the initiation by our Government of the moratorium a year ago that time proved to be a dud."

In the House late yesterday Representative Schafer (Republican), Wisconsin, tried to prevent the payment of any money for mail handling to foreign governments which had failed to meet their obligations to the United States.

He offered an amendment to the pending Treasury-Postoffice appropriations bill to institute such a restriction, but it was ruled out of order.

"The press reports," he said, "that France refuses to pay the insignificant sum of $20,000,000 due December 15, notwithstanding the fact that the United States saved France from annihilation.

"France has sufficient funds to maintain huge armaments. The little, paltry $20,000,000 due tomorrow amounts only to about 3 per cent of what she spends annually on arms.

"I sincerely hope the next President will collect dollar for dollar on the war debts."

Translation of Belgian Note Declining to Pay

(Associated Press.)

The following is a translation of the text of the note in French delivered to the Secretary of State yesterday by the Belgian Ambassador, advising the United States that Belgium can not make its payment on war debts which is due today:

In his declaration of November 23 last, the President of the United States recalled the bases on which the debt agreements had been made. The settlement made, he said, took account of economic conditions and of the capacity to pay of each debtor nation.

In his annual report for 1924-25 the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States defined the idea of capacity to pay. Such capacity does not imply the obligation, on the part of the foreign debtor, to pay to full limit of his present or future capacity.

The debtor government, he said, must be able to persevere and improve its economic position, assure the balancing of its budget and place its finances, as well as its monetary system on sound basis. It must also be able to maintain, and if possible, improve, the standard of living of its citizens.

In its note of December 5 the Belgian government set forth what were the effects for Belgium of the moratorium, the initiative for which was taken by the President of the United States in 1931, and of the Lausanne agreement, which resulted therefrom. Actuated by a spirit of solidarity, Belgium, being desirous of contributing to economic recovery, sacrificed a credit which was guaranteed to her by the most solemn engagements and which constituted an essential element for the balancing of her public finances.

This sacrifice to which she consented, added to the effects of the general paralysis of economic activities, has brought her face to face with the most serious financial difficulties.

Belgium had hoped that a friendly arrangement taking account of the situation might have been reached before the payment of December 15. The Government of the United States has judged it to be impossible.

Under such conditions the Belgium government can not but state that these circumstances prevent it from resuming on December 15 the payments which were suspended by virtue of the agreement made in July, 1931. Belgium is still disposed to collaborate fully in seeking a general settlement of intergovernmental debts and of the other problems arising from the depression.

Change in Supply Bill Is Defeated

Would Have Prevented Buying Products Made by Prison Labor.

(Associated Press.)

Democratic leaders summoned absent members to the House floor yesterday to defeat an amendment to the Treasury-Postoffice supply bill which would have prevented any part of a $4,500,000 appropriation for furniture and other supplies from being used to buy the products of prison labor.

Representative Stafford (Republican), Wisconsin, a member of the special House committee which has been investigating Government competition with private business, proposed the change in the measure. He accompanied it with a speech in which he said the new Government penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., planned to set up a furniture making establishment and that products there would be used to compete with the goods made by "free labor."

Chairman Byrns of the appropriations committee said the place to go into that matter was in dealing with Justice Department appropriations.

Federal Trade Hearing On Gas Opens Monday

(Associated Press.)

The Federal Trade Commission will hold a public hearing Monday in its investigation of the Columbia Gas & Electric Co. group, it announced yesterday.

Among the member companies whose affairs will be probed at the hearings are the United Fuel Gas Co., Charleston, W. Va., and the Huntington Gas Co., Huntington, W. Va.

LADY ASTOR THINKS DRY AMERICA IS WET

to you this: That when you are dry, you seem to be very wet. I pray that when you go wet, you may go dry.

"Drink has never improved any man or woman because all progress must be spiritual. And drink doesn't make you spiritually minded; it makes you more carnal-minded. St. Paul said: 'To be carnal-minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life.' It is because I want a life more abundant—I hope that some time, I who am dry, may be able to say to other people that it is the best way."

Lord and Lady Astor boarded the ship late tonight. They had visited in America since before the election.

The Virginia-born member of Parliament said she had sought to make "England understand what was best in America, and America to understand what is best in England."

"Sometimes it is a very trying job, but it is a worthwhile one," she said.

"I am convinced that unless these two great democracies, with the same common law and speaking the same language, can get to understand each other, then peace in this world—rotten with doubt, darkness and debts—is impossible. And if we can't get peace and understanding, we will never get prosperity and we will never get the unemployed to work again.

"I firmly believe that civilization depends more upon us, these two countries, than upon any two countries in the world. And I pray to God that we won't behave like barbarous people.

"Let's try to live up to the faith that is within us. Let's make Democracy safe for the world, or the world won't be safe for anybody—Democrats, Republicans, Progressives, Tories or even Communists."

As a farewell word, Lady Astor admonished the American people:

"In this depression, don't forget your children.

"Time and again in England we had to watch carefully so that when we made our economies we didn't economize on our children.

"Don't let them cut down on your education or on any agencies dealing with children. They mustn't suffer in this economic crisis. You can always build your bridges and your roads. If you neglect your children, you can't build them again."

HOUSE TO MAP FIGHT ON SHIFT OF BUREAUS

Enemies of Hoover Economy May Frame Program at Tomorrow's Meeting.

A course of action to be followed in blocking individually or as a whole the President's reorganization proposals may be mapped tomorrow at a meeting of the House expenditures committee, Chairman John J. Cochran indicated last night.

Cochran decided against further immediate hearings yesterday, after Col. J. Clawson Roop, director of the budget, testified that "personally" he thought it would be the wiser policy to allow the regroupings to be made by the incoming administration.

Later, Chairman Hiram Bingham, of the Senate economy committee, who had planned to call heads of the 52 bureaus scheduled for regrouping before his committee, intimated that this plan may be abandoned in the light of Roop's testimony. He said the budget director will be called before the economy committee before it decides what will be done by the Senate group.

Col. Roop's statement was made before the House expenditures committee in response to a direct question from Chairman Cochran, who asked if Roop did not think that an incoming President would be in a better position to put through a reorganization program.

The Budget director was questioned at length as to savings under the President's plan. He said any estimate at most would be only a "guess," but declared that substantial economies were involved.

The plan was attacked by a number of committee members, including Representative Schafer (Republican), Wisconsin, who opposed transfer of the Employes Compensation Commission to the Civil Service Commission; Representative Wilson (Democrat), Louisiana, who insisted that a showing of savings be made, and opposed a transfer of flood-control work; Representative Whittington (Democrat), Mississippi, who objected to "divided authority" in the work of Army engineers, and Representative Davenport (Republican), New York, who charged that corruption might result from a transfer of rivers and harbors work from the War Department.

Town Takes Court Step For Bryan Davis' Bond

An attempt to recover $5,000 on the bond of Bryan Davis, former town clerk of Takoma Park, Md., was begun in District Supreme Court yesterday when the town of Takoma Park, Md., filed suit against the Detroit Fidelity & Surety Co., which had given a bond in that amount to cover Davis' activities in his official conduct.

The charge was made in the suit that Davis had failed to account for $12,809.66 which he collected by virtue of his office as town clerk, and as treasurer of the town. Attorneys E. B. Prettyman and P. C. King, jr., represented Takoma Park.

FILIPINOS' FREEDOM IN 8 YEARS IS VOTED

But Senate Will Reconsider Ballot Today as Chaos on Bill Ensues.

(Associated Press.)

By 40 to 38, the Senate yesterday voted to free the Philippines in 8 years, but then became so involved in a parliamentary tangle over a motion to reconsider that further action was postponed until today.

The decision gave approval to an amendment by Senator Broussard (Democrat), Louisiana, striking the heart out of the Hawes-Cutting bill granting independence in eighteen years and created such confusion that sponsors of independence now do not look for a final vote until the end of the week.

Some senators, including Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, took the stand that the vote was cast under a misapprehension and that reconsideration was necessary.

Preindependence Probation.

They pointed out that the Broussard amendment not only reduced the preindependence probation period by ten years but also struck out of the Senate bill the five-year application of export taxes in the islands to go toward paying their bonded indebtedness and the provision for an independence plebiscite.

Bulow (Democrat), South Dakota, followed Robinson's suggestion and moved reconsideration, but Long (Democrat), Louisiana, an advocate of a shorter period before independence, prevented another vote by holding the floor and forcing an overnight adjournment.

The object of those moving reconsideration was to permit the fourteen-year compromise to come to a vote and then have it subjected to amendment, but to keep the tariffs or export taxes to enable the Filipinos to meet their indebtedness.

$116,000,000 in Bonds.

Chairman Bingham, of the Territories committee, which reported the Hawes-Cutting measure, said without the tax provision it would be impossible for the islanders to pay their bonds, amounting to $118,000,000.

Long warned "there will be no compromise if the plebiscite provision is retained."

Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, who voted against the Broussard amendment, told the nineteen Democrats who voted for it that "in your anxiety to carry out a platform pledge you are willing to give the Filipinos their freedom—and their death."

Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, said the amendment "only bestows a shell of self-government."

Rail Ticket Racket Is Bared in Capital

Schools Warned to Be On Guard Against Self-Styled Salesman.

Boarding and finishing schools and academies in Washington and its suburbs have been notified by police to guard against being duped by a man representing himself as a special railway agent and offering to furnish reduced fares for students going home for Christmas.

Police received a report yesterday that the man had been at the Marjorie Webster school at 7715 Seventeenth street northwest. It was reported he had all the various railroad schedules, but did not have a supply of tickets.

At the man's suggestion, three girls at that school are said to have given him tickets they had already purchased, on the promise that he would turn them in and supply them with other tickets at special reduced rates.

'YELLOW KID' WEIL AND AID ARE SEIZED

Swindlers Are Taken After Suitcase Yields $20,000 in Purported Bonds.

St. Louis, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—"Yellow Kid" Weil, swindler of international notoriety, expounded to St. Louis authorities today his theory that no crook is brainy, not even himself.

"If I were," he explained, "I would know how to make money within the law. The fact is regretable, but none the less true."

Weil and his lieutenant, Fred Buckminster, were arrested here today at the request of Kansas City authorities, who desire to examine some purported bonds the pair left in a suitcase in Kansas City.

Kansas City officers said some of the bonds purported to be a "municipal" issue by Riverdale, Ill., a Chicago postal station, and that they desired to ascertain whether the bonds are genuine or spurious.

Going Straight, He Says.

The "Yellow Kid," immaculately attired in a tweed suit, spats and black shoes, and Buckminster, wearing a homburg hat, gray suit and spats, pleasantly agreed to go to the police station. There Weil discussed with Chief of Detectives Robert Kaiser his long record as a swindler, which he said he had left behind him and was "going straight."

Chief Kaiser at first was under the impression the men were wanted for bank robbery.

"We wanted for bank robbery?" Weil asked with a discreet laugh. "Chief, surely you are jesting. We haven't been embroiled in crime for two years, and certainly not that sort of thing."

A newspaper reporter asked Weil how he made his money.

"We are content with a paltry $110 to $200 a week," Weil explained. "How do we make it? Simply by getting a certain residue, putting it into the crucible and collecting the gold. You will pardon me if I go no further into details. The plan is not substantially different from those used by various investment brokers."

Police Examine Suitcase.

Kansas City, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—A suitcase forgotten and left in Kansas City, where they spent several days, led to the arrest today in St. Louis of "Yellow Kid" Weil and his lieutenant.

Kansas City police examined the suitcase and found it to contain $20,000 in purported bonds. Meanwhile, Fred E. Hale and J. P. Davis, who had left the suitcase at a garage, asked the garage owner to send it to St. Louis on a bus.

The empty piece of baggage was placed on the bus and the St. Louis police were asked to watch for the men who received it. "Hale" and "Davis" proved to be Weil and Buckminster.

T. J. Higgins, chief of detectives, who asked for their arrest, was seeking to determine if the bonds were genuine or were merely ingenious documents to sell unsuspecting customers.

Issue by Riverdale, Ill.

Some of the bonds purportedly were of a "municipal" issue by Riverdale, Ill., which is a Chicago postal station. Others were labeled "Bank of Dalton."

Chicago, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Police and bank detectives, informed that "Yellow Kid" Weil and Fred Buckminster had been arrested in St. Louis for questioning in connection with $20,000 in bonds they had lost or abandoned in Kansas City, said tonight they would investigate whether the securities were part of a bank robbery loot.

Bonds similar to those discovered in a suitcase supposedly left by the two men in Kansas City were stolen, they said, last May 27 when a gang of men robbed the First Trust & Savings Bank of Riverdale, a suburb, of $63,000 cash and between $25,000 and $60,000 in securities.

Gold Nugget Punctures Tire.

Policemen Big-Hearted

Members of Bethesda Force Give Food, Lodging and Money to Man, Wife and Year-Old Daughter, Making Trek to Richmond.

Montgomery County policemen are big. Not only in stature but in heart. Gruff, perhaps, in exterior, but way down underneath they carry hearts that are touched by the woe they hear from itinerant travelers who pass their way. Rarely do they refuse a warm lodging place for the night and a bit of warm food where it appears needed.

Consider the Thurmans, unhappy victims of the depression. Staggering under the burden of their year-old daughter, Jane Elizabeth, carried in their arms over many a weary, cold-swept, snowy mile, with few lifts from passing motorists, they crept into the Bethesda substation and asked for lodging for the night. Unlike the fate of another tiny family, some 1900 years ago, there was room for them and a hearty welcome. Hard-jawed policemen "dug down in their jeans" to buy milk for the baby and food for the parents, and a place for them to sleep was provided in the detention room.

The father, Homer Truman, told Sergt. Leroy Rodgers they had been trekking for more than a week from their home in Huntington, W. Va., toward the home of a brother in Richmond, Va., who was willing to share with them but unable to send transportation funds. The father has been jobless for more than a year, he said.

Yesterday morning, when the little family prepared to set forth again, they found a hearty breakfast had been provided by the policemen and that a fund of $8 had been gathered from the meager pockets of the force to provide train fare to the brother's home.

RAIL WORKERS TOLD BASE PAY CUT NEAR

Roads Warn Employes They Are Facing Slash at Next Wage Parley.

Chicago, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—The railroads served notice upon their 1,150,000 employes today that the next time they discuss wages it would involve reductions in basic rates and would be held under the legal process of the railway labor act.

Spokesmen for the 47 Class 1 carriers of the country, conferring jointly with 1,500 labor leaders, answered a demand that they propose an extension of temporary pay cuts to a definite date. They suggested that the current agreement, a 10 per cent deduction which left the basic rates unchanged, be extended from next January 31 to July 31.

But they specified that neither side should propose a change in the agreement prior to July 1, and that any change or termination after that date should affect the basic rates of pay and be negotiated under the railway labor act passed by Congress in 1926.

Reply Set for Today.

Leaders of the shop crafts debated the proposal in secret session tonight. Their reply will be delivered tomorrow.

They faced a reminder by the carriers that the committee had recommended a 20 per cent slash in the basic wage rates last fall but withheld serving notice of it in hope of better times.

They also had in mind the frequent references of the roads to mediation under the act of Congress, a long and expensive procedure.

Warn Against Disaster.

Labor, however, had a similar chance to use the length and costliness of mediation proceedings as a weapon against reductions in its rate of pay. The former pay standards will be restored automatically on February 1 barring an agreement to the contrary, and they could not be disturbed during mediation until the Federal Board had reached a decision. It might take months.

The carriers today suggested that the deduction remain in effect after next July 31 until changed or canceled under the railway labor act. Labor might be expected to balk at receiving the lower pay while negotiating instead of having basic rates restored as the present agreement provides at its expiration.

Section 6 provides that either side must give 30 days notice of proposed changes in wages.

The managements have said that addition of $200,000,000 next year to its operating expenses by restoring former pay schedules would be disastrous to themselves and the country.

Labor has said wage cutting must stop.

WHITE HOUSE GUARD SET FOR VETERANS

Stember, one of the leaders of the radical wing of the first bonus army, read the petition which asked cash payment of the bonus and no cut in disability allowances. When Stember came to the paragraph asking for the condemnation of President Hoover, the Vice President said:

"Wait a minute; you will not reflect on the President of the United States nor the Speaker of the House nor either branch of Congress, or I won't accept your petition."

Then Stember handed him the petition and asked that he strike out the objectionable parts. Curtis did.

After the presentation of petitions to Speaker Garner and the Vice President the committee trooped back to the group of about 150 marchers who were awaiting them near the Senate wing. They then moved back to their headquarters at 905 I street northwest without attempting a demonstration.

On their way to the Capitol the marchers were not molested. When they reached the Senate wing they were stopped by Inspector Albert J. Headley, who advised them they should select committees to present their requests. This was done.

Strong details of Metropolitan police had been thrown about the Capitol Grounds to prevent any demonstration and to stop any large groups from entering the building.

The veterans today will go to Arlington Cemetery to pay tribute at the graves of Eric Carlson and William Hushka, who were killed in the bonus riots on July 28.

SENATE DEMOCRATS BAN CONFIRMATIONS

Chapin Only One of Hoover Nominees Approved as Others Are Blocked.

(Associated Press.)

Senate Democrats successfully raised their promised barrier against the confirmation of President Hoover's appointees yesterday and then dropped it long enough to permit approval of Roy D. Chapin, of Michigan, as Secretary of Commerce.

Of course, Chapin goes out on March 4 with the Hoover Cabinet. Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, explained that appointees who would serve beyond that time would not be considered.

He spoke with authority. The Senate by a vote of 44 to 37 had just rejected the motion of Senator McNary, of Oregon, assistant Republican leader, that the Senate go into executive session for consideration of nominations.

This roll call was believed to end the issue. The test showed the Senate divided almost strictly on party lines. Democrats voted solidly against the executive session. Senators La Follette and Blaine, of Wisconsin, Republicans, voted with them.

Senator La Follette stated that his vote was based on the fact that he regarded it a "waste of time" for the Senate to try and confirm the nominees in view of the announced Democratic opposition.

Other Senate Republican independents who had supported Gov. Roosevelt in the campaign voted with the Republicans for the executive session. This group included Senators Johnson, of California, and Cutting, of New Mexico. Senator Norris was not present. Senator La Follette announced that Senator Brookhart (Republican), Iowa, who was absent, would have voted against the executive session.

Senator Robinson reminded the Republicans that they set the precedent for blocking nominations of a retiring President by such action in 1920, after President Harding was elected to succeed Woodrow Wilson.

The sweeping Democratic ban extends to Democrats as well as Republicans named by Mr. Hoover, including Atlee Pomerene, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Representative Crisp, of Georgia, named to the Tariff Commission.

NEW YORK PAY CUTS BEFORE ROOSEVELT

Governor Harried Between City's Empty Treasury and Employe Pleas.

Albany, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Besieged by New York City employes, seeking to protect themselves against permanent reduction of their salaries, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt dropped all other affairs of State today to heap their pleas, and to make an eleventh-hour effort to save the credit of the world's second largest city.

With the New York City treasury virtually empty, the Democratic President-elect, whose administration as governor will terminate in seventeen days, found himself in the difficult role of peacemaker between the city's banker-creditors and thousands of policemen, firemen and teachers, who pleaded for protection of their salary and pension rights.

The bone of contention was the question of how long the salary reductions, to which all three groups of employes have agreed, are to remain effective.

Repeatedly the governor talked by telephone with the New York City officials. The bankers have refused to advance the city further credit unless economies are made in its government. The city officials have warned the State Legislature, in extraordinary session, that New York may see payless pay days unless the bankers' demands are met.

Scores of teachers, firemen and policemen and their legal representatives milled about the historic Hall of Governors, just outside the executive offices, for hours, awaiting some word from the governor.

The city employes asked that the salary reductions be effective for two years only. On the other hand the bankers were understood to have taken the attitude that the reductions should be permanent or at any rate for not less than five years.

Gov. Roosevelt, according to reports emanating from the executive chamber, was attempting to bring about a compromise, but late in the afternoon he appeared stymied.

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Arrangements have been made to meet the city's financial requirements until December 24, Acting Mayor Joseph V. McKee said today, pending the passage of legislation in Albany that will permit the city to reopen its budget for further trimming.

The mayor, after a telephone conversation with the bankers negotiating the city financing, said they had agreed to take care of the city's needs until December 24. After that, the mayor added, requirements will be comparatively light up to the first of the year.

Irate Woman Defies Court and Husband

Near-Divorcee Moves Into House Despite Lack of Lights and Water.

Clearwater, Fla., Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Defying any one to put her out, Mrs. E. C. Price, estranged wife of E. C. Price, reputedly wealthy Chicago manufacturer, today had possession of his home here, although on orders from Price in Chicago the lights and water had been turned off.

Price was granted a divorce here Wednesday on grounds of mental cruelty, but Circuit Judge John U. Bird was called to Virginia by his wife's illness before he signed the decree.

Through his attorney, Price yesterday obtained an injunction, restraining Mrs. Price from entering the house or removing any goods from it, but when it was executed she already had moved in and as the injunction was not retroactive, it did not force her to vacate. A deputy was assigned to guard the place.

ABOLITION OF FARM BOARD IS PLANNED IN RELIEF BILL

mestic allotment plan is now regarded seriously by considerable groups on both sides of the Capitol. Much of this new strength apparently arises from the fact that the plan is the only broad-gauge economic panacea, which has not been accorded flattering attention in Congress during the last decade.

Trial Is Agreed Upon.

Committed to the proposition that things could not be worse for the farmers, the agricultural lobbyists and their spokesmen in the halls of Congress are now agreed to try a whirl with the allotment plan.

Senate action on the proposal is doubtful.

As a stimulus to acreage reduction, the plan submitted yesterday by representatives of the principal farm relief organizations would provide a temporary bounty of $4 an acre to farmers for every acre of reduced corn acreage next year.

In summarizing the principal features of their program yesterday, the farm leaders lifted several phrases bodily from Gov. Roosevelt's farm relief speech at Topeka last summer.

Fred Lee, spokesman for the combined farm organizations before the House committee, emphasized that the plan—"agriculture's own solution for the farm problem," he called it—must be "self-sustaining and must not require the creation of any large new governmental agencies."

In his lengthy exposition, Mr. Lee made the point repeatedly that the new experiment would be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Long Study Is Cited.

"This plan is the result of months of intensive study by a special committee of these organizations," Mr. Lee added.

Representatives of several of the principal national farm organizations have been in conference here during the last ten days. Many of them demanded the present farm marketing act when new legislation was under discussion in the first Hoover Congress four years ago.

Among the organizations which already have indorsed the new project are the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange, National Live Stock Marketing Association, American Cotton Cooperative Association and the National Wool Marketing Association.

As applied to hogs only, the new scheme would authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to make direct purchases from time to time to clean up market gluts. Such purchases would be passed on to consumers in "noncompetitive channels." The principal noncompetitive channel listed in the discussions was free distribution to the needy.

The general theory of the bill is to restore by legislation the prewar parity between agricultural and industrial prices.

"Adjustment payments will be made only to those producers who shall submit satisfactory proof to the designated local agent of the Secretary of Agriculture that they have reduced their 1933 acreage by 20 per cent, and have not planted that acreage to other cash crops," Mr. Lee explained. "Payments will be made by the Treasury of the United States, the money to be recovered by an excise tax on the commodity at the point of first processing."

Direct Contrasts Stated.

After the first year, the Secretary of Agriculture would be vested with authority to enter into direct contracts with each farmer, fixing the acreage quota determined in Washington for each crop.

In support of their demands, the farm leaders cite the fact that agricultural commodities now are selling about 32 per cent below the prewar level, while industrial production still sells about 6 per cent above the 1914 scale.

"Farm leaders are positive in their statements," Mr. Lee concluded, "that there can be no approach to normal business conditions and employment until farm buying power is restored to normal."

'Upside Down' Airplane Stamp Brings $2,750

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—A postage stamp from the collection of former Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey was sold at action here today for $2,750.

The stamp was one of a sheet of 100 24-cent air mail stamps printed in error by the Government in 1918 and had the airplane in its center upside down. The name of the purchaser was not disclosed.

RELIEF IS FORECAST FOR FLOODED SOUTH

Torrential Rainfall for Days Forces 400 to Abandon Homes at Rome, Ga.

Atlanta, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Residents of low-lying sections of Rome, Ga., driven to higher ground by the swollen streams converging there, saw relief today in forecasts of colder weather and a cessation of many days of rain as Alabama and Mississippi rivers crept higher.

The Etowah River, which meets the Oostanaula in Rome to form the Coosa, began falling slightly late in the day, easing the pressure on the Oostanaula, which had sent muddy water over the western part of the city and forced approximately 400 persons to abandon their homes. The weather bureau here announced that rains in the northwest part of the State would cease after tonight if unforeseen factors did not interfere.

The Oostanaula River, which traverses Rome, reached 32 feet at the Fifth Avenue Bridge, a few feet from the floor of the bridge, which connects the main part of the city with the flooded western section, and was still rising.

A foot of water was standing in the western part of Rome and relief workers said about 400 persons had left their homes. The army provided 200 blankets and 100 cots.

Influenza Appears.

Dr. W. H. Lewis reported an outbreak of mild influenza, saying about 100 cases had been found. The public schools were closed at noon until after the Christmas holidays. One school was completely surrounded by water.

Canton, east of Rome, reported resumption of road travel after being cut off for several days.

A warning was issued today by the Weather Bureau at Montgomery to residents and live stock owners living along the Alabama River, to take precautions against an overfloow because there were indications of a 30-foot stage at some points by night. A rise of more than 6 feet in the Alabama at Montgomery was reported since yesterday.

Tombigbee on Warpath.

Expectations were that the Tombigbee would reach a 58-foot stage at Demopolis by Saturday, where the flood stage is 39 feet. At last reports the stream was above 41 feet.

Jackson, Miss., reported almost uninterrupted rainfall for a week had pushed Mississippi's inland streams to dangerous levels and resulted in the issuance of flood warnings. Pearl River was threatening to disrupt that city's sewerage system and drive lowland residents from their homes.

Flood warnings on the Yazoo were issued from the Weather Bureau at Vicksburg. R. T. Lindley, meteorologist, said the stream will reach 25 feet at Swan Lake by Monday, where the flood stage is 24 feet.

In eastern Mississippi the Tombigbee River also was threatening highways and had flooded extensive lowland areas.

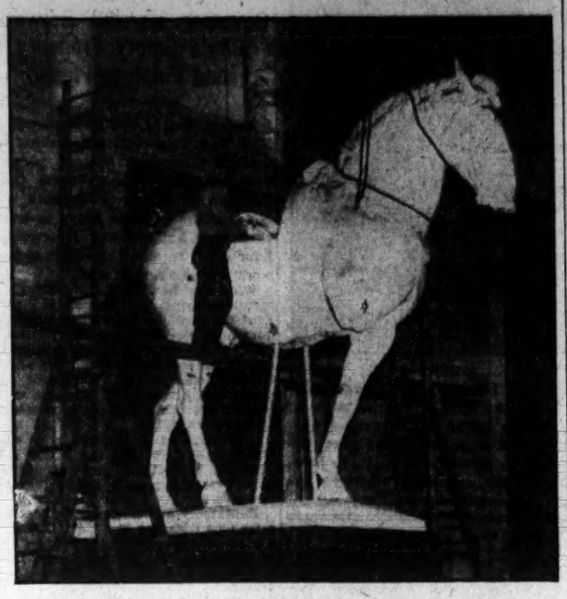
The Federal Diary

By GEORGE D. RILEY



Reminiscent of the Trojan horse, A. J. Continni is shown as he was about to lift the head from the equestrian Lafayette at the National Museum yesterday.

SWARMI FEDD missed the familiar gilded plaster figure of Columbia at the entrance to the National Museum. It is the one big exception to the axiom, "Swarmi knows all."

In the rotunda there was the green plaster of young Franklin, no head, hand missing and the familiar staff gone. And if Swarmi knows his history, it recited that young Franklin never lost his head, always cool, especially this time of year. Looked for a while like my friend, W. H. Egberts, had a job ahead putting those spare parts together.

Swarmi Fedd had seen all and now he must know all. He hunted up A. J. Continni and his son to learn what it was all about.

Mr. Continni was uncommunicative at first. Perhaps it was artistic temperament. Maybe not.

The answer was easy. It was the exodus of the immortals. Lafayette young Franklin, Washington, Columbia and a host of others, perhaps better identified by reference to the guide book, were going home. They'd been our visitors during the Washington Bicentennial, but now were bidding adieu, one by one. Seven truck loads already had been cleared out and Mr. Continni was there to see that all the pieces were loaded according to, let us say, according to Continni. Back to Philadelphia and New York.

"Your son's name, Mr. Continni?"

"Orazio, tell the gentleman how you spell your name."

Swelled with pride at being called a gentleman, Swarmi Fedd almost spelled Orazio with a "g."

"And Mr. Continni, the huge equestrian of Lafayette, does that go, too?"

"Lafayette, he will come down just about at the button."

Ah, something Rupert Hughes overlooked. Lafayette got it on the button. Okeh, Rupert!

Suppose you were a statue
And you had to hold it still,
You couldn't go to lunch,
You couldn't have a thrill.

Suppose your face were bronze-like,
You leaned upon a staff;
You couldn't get a teeny "kick,"
No, not even only half.

Lafayette'll quit his high horse,
Columbia, Franklin, Washington
Leave the U. S. National Museum
When Continni's work is done.

Fractured bones, broken necks,
Getting things together all,
Just part of one day's work
In the statuary hall.

All parts will go together
Once the statues get back home;
Be just as good as new again
When they finish up their roam.

Continni knows his statues,
He packs 'em all with care;
Say not there're broken pieces,
No, don't you even dare.

NOW that Kate Smith has gone "over the mountains" (Rocky) to Hollywood, Calif., we learn that little sister, Helaine, Department of Justice, is planning to leave for the West to pay a Christmas visit to the popular songstress...and Swarmi Fedd had to get this information all the way from Hollywood...He just can't get any information from that Buerau of Prisons. But Swarmi hears all.

For instance, the grapevine tipoff is to the effect that Jesse S. Barrows recently went on a hunting trip "somewhere in Pennsylvania." A word was dropped of a "nineteen-point buck," but whether the animal was shot, half shot, or just scared to death, or died a natural death, we have not yet ascertained. But there are "bucks," other than the deer variety. Maybe Swarmi Fedd will polish up the old doorknob a little more and really look into this matter.

Winter evenings are with us. We find the generally popular year-around indoor sport, bridge, is approaching its seasonal peak. One of the most enthusiastic players ye encountered in Uncle Sam's big family is Arthur E. Knowles, Clearing Division, Bureau of Internal Revenue, who maintains he had rather play auction with those who understand the game than to limp along with mediocre contract players. He wins by the Culbertson System, the same as explained in The Washington Post. But, sharing his interest in bridge are glowing visions of an old-fashioned Hoosier Christmas back home with his mother on a spacious farm at Owensville, Ind.

The Radio Commission examiner was holding hearings most of last week on which of two Louisville stations should have the bigger place in the "sun." A witness was testifying. Gradually it became harder and harder to hear his words. Good old static, or was it local interference?

"Wake that man up," instructed Ellis A. Yost, examiner. "He's snoring and disturbing the proceedings."

And the waked-up man proved to be none other than David B. G. Rose, self-admitted "champion snorer of Kentucky."

To some it may be a "skin game," but to those who know their skins the fur seal exhibit in the Commerce Building lobby, ground floor, represents real money and expert talent. Fisheries Commissioner Henry O'Malley has installed a case containing sealskins in various stages of preparation from the seal's back to your back.

America is giving itself the air more and more. Col. Clarence M. Young, Assistant Secretary for Aeronautics, has been figuring it out and finds 44 per cent of air passenger space in October, 1932, is occupied, compared with 40 per cent for October, 1931.

Everybody is on the move back home in Jefferson City, Mo., Mrs. Verna Willis, Agriculture, bacteriologist, just back from furlough, found.

Seems Republicans are moving out, Democrats are moving in.

Date worth remembering: Dec. 15, 1917—Leviathan began sailing as American transport.

"A decision of The Post to set aside daily a portion of the paper to a column devoted to Federal employes is a step in a progressive direction which I wish to commend," writes John Arthur Shaw, president, American Federation of Government Employes. "This column, I am sure will have a wide interest for your readers in Washington, the home of so many men and women in the Government service. Its usefulness and interest should increase."

Mr. Shaw, thanks. Comments would be superfluous.

Chaplain Joseph H. Sutherland, retired, who now resides in Washington, visitor at the officer of J. E. Yates, chief of chaplains, War Department.

Hoyt Barnett, current information, Commerce, is squandering a payless vacation prospecting for gold in the form of temporary employment with a press association. Hoyt hails from the Pacific Northwest.

E. B. Hull, Navigation and Steamboat Inspection Bureau. Hobby, wood carving. He has carved entirely from wood a 3-foot model of the Great Lakes steamer Alcona's engine. He served as chief engineer on the good ship in 1904. The model is complete and works!

Nine retirements are announced this week by the Department of Agriculture, as follows: Matthew D. Thomas, senior lay inspector, 23 years 1 month; Francis H. Noyes, assistant scientific illustrator, entomology, 26 years; Michael J. Moran, senior lay inspector, animal industry, 26 years; Maurice H. Mendenhall, assistant veterinarian, animal industry, 26 years; James S. Kelly, associated veterinarian, animal industry, 35 years 7 months; Archer H. Gunn, guard, office of Secretary, 13 years 9 months; William E. Burrows, senior lay inspector, animal industry, 29 years 7 months; George Stuart Brown, senior lay inspector, 29 years 2 months, and Artemas Brown, food and drugs inspector, 25 years 2 months.

Even his best friends won't tell him, or at least he won't tell his best friends. L. W. Cain, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, so far has failed to tell his associates the why of his cane, this sudden taking up with a swagger stick. However, Swarmi Fedd's solution seems about right. Cain and his cane help each other over the Alpine-like hills of Virginia, where both live. Those ice-covered and primitive trails now assure Cain safety with the aid of Cain's cane.

THE In-Com-Co, Interstate Commerce Commission employes publication, takes official cognizance of the Federal Diary's efforts to round out the morning's bacon and egg by saying "George D. Riley wields the baton, and his initial efforts in this newest Post feature offer a mixture of Walter Winchell, Edwin C. Hill and the late Washington Brevities, of course with the left-handed swings decorously deleted.

Mr. In-Com-Co, for that crack about Brevities, the penalty will be more, and worse, doggerel.

(Thanks to In-Com-Co.)

Mrs. Helen Will knows her recipes. She won a basket of groceries on a new recipe for sausage.

"A PRACTICAL ROMANTICIST."

By R. E. FREER, I. C. C.

I'd swim the wild Missouri;
I'd climb the highest Rockies—
For you, my sweet potpourri,
I'd even darn the sockies.

All this I'd do with gladness,
If you but ask'd it's doing.
But why waste time in madness
That could be spent in wooing?

The Federal Bridge League will meet in executive session this evening at 10 B street southwest, N. F. F. E., to approve the constitution and discuss splitting the season into two halves. Harry C. Wensel, president, will preside, with captains of the sixteen teams voting. Next competition takes place at the Hotel Carlton Tuesday, but December 27 will be an open date.

Charter Is Presented U. S. Employes Lodge

A charter in the American Federation of Government Employes was presented yesterday afternoon to Capital City Lodge, No. 7, at the federation's headquarters at 1726 Pennsylvania avenue.

John A. Shaw, national president of the federation, made the presentation to the group, which is made up of guards and watchmen. John R. Newman, national secretary, also spoke.

CIVIL SERVICE CHIEF OPPOSES FURLOUGHS IN ECONOMY ACT

bill, which gives the budget director authority to reduce specific appropriations by the amount he estimates to be the savings of economy act provisions.

Amendments sponsored by Representative Mead will include proposals to remove the ban on automatic promotions, to reestablish the night pay differential, to exempt pay under $1,000 from the 8 1-3 per cent cut, to restore railway mail travel pay allowances from $2 to $3, and to reimburse employes forcibly retired last July 10, who received no pay for a 21-day period.

LaGuardia Is Active.

LaGuardia will fight every economy act provision and will seek to increase the salary exemption from furlough cuts to $1,500.

Three members of the Senate economy committee, which meets this morning, have expressed themselves in favor of substituting a flat cut for the furlough. They are Senators Byrnes, South Carolina; McKellar, Tennessee, and Bratton, New Mexico, all Democrats. Chairman Bingham once favored substituting a cut for the furlough, but now is inclined to believe it might cost some jobs.

Campbell, before the committee yesterday, asked abolition of the legislative furlough and return of pay schedules previously in effect.

If economies must be effected, this can be done by a wider use of the "administrative" furlough, under which bureaus short of funds lay off surplus employes, he said. He thought the "married workers' clause" should be amended to prevent couples from evading its terms by voluntary separation.

Questioned by McKellar.

Questioned by McKellar about a flat-cut substitute for the furlough, Campbell agreed this would be the "fairest" method, providing Congress was intent on some form of reduction.

Bratton said he personally was opposed to broader "administrative" furlough provisions. He said it gives bureau heads too much say about who shall be furloughed and for how long.

LaGuardia, in explaining yesterday why he seeks to knock out section 5 of the Postoffice bill, said it would give the budget director power to impose further cuts on top of the furlough reduction.

"This would be a dangerous precedent to establish," he said.

GERMANY RETURNS TO ARMS MEETING

Powers Planning to Continue Harmony Conversations in January.

Geneva, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—The general commission of the world disarmament conference, meeting today for the first time since July 23, formally received Germany back into the conference and adjourned until January 31.

The leading powers, meanwhile, are planning to continue in January their conversations which resulted in reuniting the conference and will be joined in their private deliberations by Arthur Henderson, president of the conference, who will be an observer for the plenary conference.

The invitation asking Mr. Henderson to attend failed to appease entirely the lesser powers whose representatives professed to see in the continuation of the big five parleys a threat against the authority of the conference itself.

The committee for studying the military forces of the various nations has drawn up a complete scheme for determining the relative value of armies, but their work appears doomed to failure through the continued Franco-German disagreement.

The German representatives object to the exclusion of trained reserves from the application of the effectives committee's scheme. The French insist on such exclusion.

At the brief meeting today representatives of the lesser powers voiced their resentment to the alleged usurpation of the duties of the conference by the private five-power disarmament discussions of the past week.

BOYLAN PROMISES TO FIGHT PAY CUTS

to greater efforts in their own behalf.

"You ought to be more aggressive," he said. "You don't get what's really coming to you."

"We're going to try, if we can," he continued, "to eliminate furloughs. I don't know how far we'll get."

Boylan told the delegates that the 8 1-3 per cent reduction effected by the economy act brought wage standards of Government employes in many cases down to those of 1893.

The New York representative said that representatives from big cities were all in accord with keeping Government wages on a decent standard. Rural representatives, he said, were the bar against equitable salary scales.

The rural legislator, he said, is likely to "look at things on a cheaper scale because of the lower living costs faced by his constituents." Boylan said he hoped to "convince my friends from the rural sections" of the unfairness of this attitude.

Declaring that he began his career in the New York Legislature at the same time President-elect Roosevelt did, Representative Boylan said:

"I know that he will always lend a friendly ear to Government employes who are working so faithfully for the Federal service. You will always have a good friend to appeal to and let us hope a new day is dawning for the Government worker."

The average Government wage of $1,440 per year was described by the New York legislator as "starvation wages." He bitterly attacked the present 8 1-3 reduction and even more bitterly attacked the proposal of President Hoover to superimpose an 11 per cent reduction.

Representative Boylan, who is a New York real estate operator by profession, assailed living costs here. He said his experience showed him that rents are much higher here than in New York, where he said they are certainly higher than in many other places.

The 20 per cent reduction in living costs which he said President Hoover spoke of in recommending the 11 per cent further reduction was mocked by Representative Boylan, who said he didn't know just how it "was figured."

Representative Boylan was introduced by John A. Shaw, national president of the organization, who said that the depression was a result of "hysteria" on the part of the American people and that such "hysteria" brought about the lowering of Government wage scales.

Novelist's Son Scoffs At Deportation Threat

Detroit, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Halvard Lange Bojer, son of the Norwegian novelist, Johan Bojer, informed that a deportation order from the United States has been issued against him, today refused to leave the country voluntarily.

Deportation at the expense of the Government, immigration officials said, means that young Bojer will not be allowed to reenter the United States.

Cities Fight

Order of State for Sale of Public Buildings to Meet Tax.

(Copyright, 1932, by the United Press.)

Columbia, S. C., Dec. 14.—Two South Carolina cities—Greenville and Florence—served notice on the State tax commission today they would not submit to a sheriff's auction of their city halls and other property to satisfy a State tax claim without a vigorous court fight.

The City of Columbia, another of four cities similarly served with tax executions by Chairman W. G. Query, of the State tax board, not regarded in sympathy with the position of Greenville and Florence, set about finding ways and means of meeting the obligation, while Spartanburg, the fourth city, awaited a meeting of city council.

Similar action is pending against the counties of Greenville, Cherokee and Darlington, but the county of Edgefield, originally named with the others by Chairman Query, was released today on promise of State Senator J. S. Thurmond that the county's legislative delegation would include in the 1933 county supply bill adequate provision to meet the tax.

DOCTOR WILLS BODY TO SCIENTIFIC STUDY

W. S. Thayer, Johns Hopkins Professor, Requests Friend To Direct Examination.

Baltimore, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—The will of Dr. William Sidney Thayer, professor emeritus of the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, who died Saturday, directed that his body should be given to scientific study before being cremated and buried at Concord, Mass. Mass.

The will, filed today in Orphans Court, also leaves books and manuscripts to several libraries and relatives and the residue of the estate to his sister, Mrs. Sarah Ripley Ames, of Cambridge, Mass.

The first several clauses of his will were devoted to instructions concerning posthumous examinations of his body. The will began by saying:

"I direct that on my death a necropsy be performed upon my body for the purpose of scientific study at the earliest possible moment after my death, preferably by my dear friend, William G. Maccallum.

Examination of Heart.

"I should like especially to have the condition of my coronary arteries and heart muscles carefully explored.

"Especially do I desire that my friend, Dr. Adolph Meyer, may, if he so desires, have every opportunity to study my brain. The interest which may attach to this lies in the circumstance that I have had for about fourteen years, since a resection of my nasal septum, a complete anosmia.

Inscription on Tombstone.

"After a complete necropsy, after which any parts of my body which may be useful may be preserved, I direct that the remains be cremated and the ashes buried at Sleepy Hollow Graveyard, at Concord, Mass."

Another clause, stating his wife, Mrs. Susan Read Thayer, had wished her body cremated, said he regretted not having made such arrangement, and directed "her coffin be removed from the grave and that her remains be cremated" and interred with his beside the grave of their only child.

He left directions that inscription on his tombstone be simple and that he "was the husband of Susan Read Thayer."

Firemen Accept 45 Volunteers.

The Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department last night admitted 45 new members and received applications for 32 new members, who are to be voted on at the next meeting. The department has added about 200 members to its rolls in the present membership campaign. Nomination of officers will take place at the December 28 meeting.

ANGLO-PERSIAN ROW IS TAKEN TO LEAGUE

Britain Asks Early Action; Commission May Be Sent to Teheran.

Geneva, Dec. 14 (U.P.).—Great Britain today referred her dispute with Persia over cancellation of the vast Anglo-Persian Oil Co.'s concession to the council of the League of Nations.

The British foreign office asked that the matter be given earliest consideration and it was thought likely the council would discuss it next Monday or Tuesday.

The dispute, which has led to talk of war, may result in the league's sending a commission, similar to the Lytton Sino-Japanese commission, to Teheran to examine all aspects of the problem.

The Persian government yesterday made it clear that it will stand firmly on the cancellation and defy Great Britain's demand for a withdrawal.

Loses No Time in Plea.

Sir John Simon, the British foreign secretary, wasted no time in taking action. Persia threatened to refer the dispute to the league, but Britain beat the Teheran government to it.

The British ultimatum to Persia demanded that the cancellation be withdrawn, otherwise the matter would be referred to the Court of International Justice. Persia's reply, made public in Teheran yesterday, said in effect that if Britain were going to try to use pressure the dispute would be taken directly to the league.

Letter of Sir John Simon.

Sir John Simon's letter to the secretary-general of the league said:

"On behalf of his majesty's government I request you to insert in the agenda of the council the following:

"'The dispute which has arisen between his majesty's government and Persia as a consequence of the Persian government's action in purporting to cancel the concession held by the Anglo-Persian Oil Co., a British company.'

"I hope the council will be able to take this matter into consideration at a very early date."

The Persian government, it was understood here, also will file an appeal with the league council shortly.

Georgia Planning To Organize Drys

Similar Movement Begins in Alabama, South Carolina and Mississippi.

Atlanta, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Leading ministers and laymen of Georgia assembled here today, announced plans to organize the State and the South in a campaign against any change in the eighteenth amendment or modification of the Volstead act.

Dr. Walter Anthony, of Macon, was named chairman of the group. It was announced after the meeting that the group's headquarters would be at Macon and a meeting would be held there early in January to perfect additional plans for the campaign.

As the first step in the organization work, it was announced that every county in the State will be organized. Leaders of the Georgia movement, it was said, will confer shortly with leaders in Mississippi, Alabama, South Carolina and other States in which similar movements have been launched.

Columbia Heights Group Opposes U. S. Pay Cuts

Resolutions opposing further pay cuts for Government employes and commending the Police and Fire Departments on the way they handled the hunger marchers were adopted at a regular meeting of the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association.

The resolution opposing further pay cuts declared such reductions would only result in retarding a return to prosperity. It pointed out that employes would be unable to meet their obligations, cause congestion among cheap housing facilities and hamper the stabilization of living conditions and the relief of distress.

car joined in the running gun battle which ended when Wilson leaped into a parked taxicab and, after firing several more shots, collapsed. He was found dead on the floor of the cab, with seven bullet holes drilled through his head and body.

Back in his office Dr. Walsh lay crumpled on the floor with three wounds in his abdomen. His nurse, Mae Connery, summoned an ambulance and he was taken to Lutheran Hospital, where an immediate blood transfusion was decided upon.

Dr. Walsh's office is at 676 Riverside Drive, near 145th street. Wilson was slain in 144th street, between Broadway and Amsterdam avenue.

Second Gun Battle.

It was the second running gun battle through upper Manhattan streets today. Two corcial shop robbers killed a policeman and wounded two others in a wild flight this afternoon.

As a result of Police Commissioner Mulrooney's orders to "shoot first" this morning, the policemen in tonight's chase lost no time unlimbering their weapons.

Wilson's identification was based only on the information he gave Dr. Walsh over the telephone. Two letters were found in his pockets, both addressed to Victor Hugo, at the Plaza Hotel, Yonkers.

Dr. Walsh is married and the father of three children, ranging from 2 to 10 years old. He was a member of the Giants' pitching staff in 1912, was graduated from Fordham Medical School in 1915 and has been the Giants' physician for ten years. He earned his way through medical school by pitching for the Giants.

YOUNG SANTA CLAUS AIDS

After bringing in their favorite toys to the Santa Claus lady in The Post Library to be included in The Post Toy Fund, little Walter William and Frances Lee Wilcox, of 2804 Fourteenth street northwest, stayed awhile to treat themselves to a little pre-Christmas joy playing among the hundreds of toys accumulated by The Post for distribution to less fortunate children.

Only 10 Days Remain to Fill Stocking of Post Toy Fund

$400 Mark Is Passed and Strong Plea Is Made for Remainder.

Will Santa Claus pass by thousands of Washington homes this Christmas?

This is the big question confronting social welfare workers this year as their desks are piled high with details of depression-stricken families unable to get the bare essentials of life, let alone provide toys and other Christmas delights for their little ones at this merry season of the year.

Much of this uncertainty will be dispelled if The Post Toy and Doll Fund goes over the top with $1,000 in donations, to be distributed through the Council of Social Agencies to the wards of various relief and welfare associations of the city, and at least 10,000 toys are given to the fund.

Last night the fund itself passed the $400 mark. Only ten days remain to complete that $1,000. There is every assurance that the $500 mark will be passed by Saturday night. Then the last efforts will be made to collect the remaining $500.

Persons reading this appeal are urged to send in their gifts at once, as the sooner the Council of Social Agencies can give the money to the various relief and welfare organizations to purchase toys, the sooner will the anxiety of hundreds of parents in the city be allayed.

These parents can stand privation, can sacrifice and go without many things in order that their children may have better and more food, but the hopeless ache that comes with the knowledge that this year the high privilege of fathers and mothers to make their children happy will be denied to them appears as the last bitter stroke of a relentless fate. Such tragedy can be averted through the generosity of the more fortunate who in such a year of economic stress might well send in their gifts as thank offerings. Many of the growing pile of letters that bring sadness to the usually smiling face of the Santa Claus Lady tell this in undeniable outline.

Santa Claus will recruit hundreds of new aids on Saturday when the big candy, cooky and popcorn sale is held at 3730 McKinley street northwest, by the four children of Representative and Mrs. Clyde Kelly, of Pennsylvania. The sale will last from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Must children ask in vain for the Christmas joys that are the inherent right of every child? By helping the Post Toy and Doll Fund you can help to make these Christmas dreams come true.

HOOVER'S BEER VIEW WITHHELD BY MILLS; DEMANDS SALES TAX

plishing this purpose that he knew of.

At the conclusion of his formal statement Mills was asked by Representative Rainey, of Illinois, Democratic floor leader:

"Will President Hoover sign the bill?"

"Oh, Mr. Rainey, you know no one speaks for the President," the Secretary replied.

"Do you favor the bill?"

"I am not here to present the President's views or the administration's views," he replied. "I am not here to express my personal opinion." He said he was present to discuss only the revenue phases of the legislation and not to pass on its social or constitutional questions.

Mills' testimony and examination consumed the entire morning session, during which he engaged in several sharp exchanges with Rainey and other members of the committee over the administration-supported sales levy defeated in the House last spring.

Led by F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Antisaloon League, a number of prominent dry leaders were heard at the afternoon session.

Chairman Collier plans to call the committee together today in executive session to revise the bill. He said he hoped it would be reported to the House for action next Tuesday.

A second effort is to be made today by Senator Blaine (Republican), Wisconsin, to call the judiciary subcommittee together to consider drafting of a resolution to repeal the eighteenth amendment.

"Arbitrary and Unfair."

McBride presented to the ways and means committee resolutions adopted by the board of directors of his organization at a meeting here this week reaffirming "faith in the policy of national, constitutional prohibition as the only practical solution of the beverage alcohol problem." "We are opposed to beer because it is an intoxicating liquor," he said.

The testimony of Secretary Mills, McBride said, showed "how infinitesimal" the revenue from beer would be, and was immediately challenged by Representative Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, who said:

"I think your statement that $125,000,000 is infinitesimal is arbitrary and unfair."

"It is unimportant as far as putting the beer bill into effect and balancing the budget is concerned," McBride replied.

Treadway and Representative Estep (Republican), Pennsylvania, questioned McBride about expenditures of the Antisaloon League in answer to the witness' charge that liquor interests had spent large sums of money to break down prohibition.

"Are your skirts any cleaner than the brewers' and distillers'?" Treadway asked.

"Yes, they are," McBride replied.

"By that do you mean you have not spent as much as the liquor interests?" Treadway pursued. McBride said that 90 per cent of the league's funds went for "educational purposes."

Estep then produced figures indicating the league has spent $18,818,422 between 1920 and 1929, and McBride said it was expended "to sustain sentiment for prohibition."

$100,000 Expended in 1928.

"You have spent about $19,000,000 to sustain prohibition sentiment and apparently have failed to sustain it," Estep said.

In answer to a question whether the league had lobbyists in its employ, McBride said, "Yes, but it depends on what you call a lobbyist." Only about 10 per cent of the money was spent for political activities, he said, but in answer to a question he added the league had spent $100,000 in the 1928 presidential campaign between Herbert Hoover and Alfred E. Smith.

Other witnesses at the afternoon session included Dr. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, of the National Temperance Bureau; Edward B. Dunford, of the Antisaloon League; Oliver W. Stewart, of the Flying Squadron Foundation; George Shibley, of the League for Concurrent Prohibition, all of Washington; Grant M. Hudson, of Lansing, Mich., of the Northern Baptist Convention; James A. Crain, of the Disciples of Christ, Indianapolis, and Mrs. Lon O. Hocker, of St. Louis, president of the Daughters of the American Constitution.

Public Health Director Indorses Liquor Drink

San Francisco, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Incredulous San Francisco gave a shocked wail when Dr. J. C. Geiger, director of public health, prescribed tom and jerry "with plenty of hot milk" as a salutary cold weather drink.

Hotel chefs, restaurateurs, cooks all chorused that tom and jerry is made of eggs, sugar and nutmeg with brandy or rum, or both, with hot water. Milk, they added, is for egg-nog.

ALEXANDRIA CLOSES BICENTENNIAL YEAR

Plaque at School Is Unveiled and Exercises Are Held at Old Church.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Two celebrations, which mark the close of the Bicentennial year in Alexandria, were held yesterday, the 133d anniversary of the death of George Washington, the first being in observance of that event, and the other being the dedication of a plaque on the Washington School, which was founded by George Washington in 1785, and attended by Robert E. Lee from 1818 to 1824.

The plaque on Washington School, which bears a bas relief of Washington, was unveiled by little Anne Carter Lee Ely, 3-year-old great-granddaughter of Gen. Robert E. Lee, and immediately after the flag which draped the plaque was drawn back, Hanson Edward Ely 3d, brother of little Anne, read before the microphone an address to the school children of America.

An address preliminary to the unveiling of the plaque was delivered by William B. McGroarty, president of the Washington Society of Alexandria, under whose auspices the dedication was held.

Copies of First Books.

Owing to the inclement weather the speeches and music were held in the old Presbyterian Meeting House on South Fairfax street. John B. Gordon, master of ceremonies, told the story of the oldest free school in America, founded and endowed by Washington; an address on "What Free Schools Mean to America," was delivered by Hugh T. Williams, of Danville, Va., chairman of the national Americanization committee of the American Legion; President Francis P. Gaines, of Washington and Lee University, took as his topic, "A School Lives On," and William John Cooper, U. S. Commissioner of Education, spoke on "A National Shrine for Education."

Mr. Cooper expressed the hope that this old building might be kept as a shrine to be visited by the many thousands of school children who pass through Alexandria each year, and that copies of the first school books used in America, among them Noah Webster's "Blue-backed Speller," might be placed on exhibition there. The building is on Wolfe street, facing the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard, and would be a convenient stop for sight-seeing buses en route to Mount Vernon.

The celebration of the anniversary of the death of Washington, held in the old Presbyterian Meeting House, in the yard of which many of the friends and compatriots of Washington are buried, was under the auspices of the Sons of the Revolution.

31 Patriotic Societies.

Mr. Gordon opened the program with a greeting to the 31 national patriotic societies participating in the ceremonies. At this time the Sons of the Revolution dedicated a $6,000 wall which they have erected around the graves of the friends, neighbors, and comrades of George Washington in the 300 block of South Fairfax street.

John Garland Pollard, jr., son of the governor and director of the Virginia Bicentennial Commission, spoke on the contribution of Virginia to the Bicentennial and stated that Virginia had celebrated the Bicentennial in some section of the State practically every day during the past year.

Col. John W. Williams, clerk of the Virginia House of Delegates, spoke on the contribution of George Washington's home town to the Bicentennial, detailing the various activities in Alexandria, beginning with a reproduction of the birthnight balls held in Gadsby's Tavern, the last of which was attended by Gen. Washington in 1799.

Memorial to Dr. Craik.

Dr. Thomas M. Green, national chaplain of the General Society of the Sons of the Revolution, referred to the fact of that organization's participation, at the beginning of the year, in a memorial service to Dr. Craik, physician to Gen. Washington; the interest of his organization in the schools, and the reorganization of the Washington Society of Alexandria, many members of the reorganized society being descendants of the members of the original organization, founded shortly after the death of Washington.

Mrs. Evelyn Howard Sheridan, accompanied by the United States Army Band, sang "There Is No Death," and later, accompanied by Miss Frances Alexander Sinclair, descendant of the founder of Alexandria, on the oldest church organ in use in America, sang Kipling's "Recessional." This organ, long disused, has been in the old Presbyterian Meeting House almost ever since the erection of the original building, and in recent years has been renovated and again placed in use.

The Army Band played in the course of the celebration. Both exercises were broadcast.

Prince Georges' Hunt License Demand Gains

Demands for hunting licenses in Prince Georges County are about 10 per cent heavier than they were last year, it was announced yesterday by Brice Bowie, clerk of the court. Last year about 3,100 were issued and this year more than 3,400 have already been given out.

The demand is so heavy that the regular license forms have been exhausted, and licenses written in long hand are being issued. Hunters are forced to make up their own tag, which must be sewed on the back of the coat, although these are usually given out with the license.

Elderly Colored Man Found Dead in Woods

Apparently dying of exposure after he became lost in last week's storm while cutting wood near his home, the body of Raymond Hickman, 80-year-old colored man, was found yesterday near Silver Hill, Md. Searching parties had looked for Hickman Saturday when he failed to return home last Friday night. His body was within a few hundred feet of a dwelling when found. Hickman's sight was failing, and Policeman William E. Clifton, who investigated the case, believes that he was overtaken by darkness and was unable to find his way out of the woods.

CONFIDENCE IN FIRE UNIT IS EXPRESSED

Chief Rushe, of Hyattsville, Calls Council Members "Pigheaded."

A vote of confidence was given the Hyattsville fire department by the Prince Georges County Firemen's Association last night after Noble F. Rushe told the association that the charges against him as chief were "a bunch of damn lies."

Rushe also alluded to the council, which Monday adopted a resolution dismissing him from the fire department, as "that burlesque show," and called one of the councilmen "pigheaded." He charged that his dismissal was done for "hidden political reasons," while George Wiseman, of the Bladensburg fire department, said that the same forces working for Rushe's dismissal were arrayed against every other fire company in the county.

Before giving the vote of confidence, the association applauded C. E. Trott's statement that "Noble Rushe is still chief." Noah Joffe, president of the county-wide unit, offered the services of the officers and board of directors to aid the Hyattsville company in its fight against the edict of the town council. Replying to one of the charges against him, Rushe pointed out that there is no town ordinance prohibiting taking fire apparatus out of the town, which he is charged with doing. He also declared the fire department to be a separate corporation, and said that a legal opinion had declared the fire ordinance of the town to be unconstitutional.

A committee to revise the by-laws of the association was appointed, to consist of T. W. Venemann, H. B. McDonnell and C. E. Trott. The application of the Accokeek department for membership was received subject to the report of the standards committee, with the proviso that this company should share in the distribution of the 1933 funds received from the county commissioners.

Prince Georges School Attendance Leads State

With attendance averages in Prince Georges County above last year's marks for both September and October, that county is leading the State in attendance at the white elementary schools as it has for the last three years.

The attendance in September was 97.7 per cent, and in October it was 95.5 per cent, according to Miss Kathleen Shears, attendance officer.

Assault Brings Three Years.

Convicted of assaulting Ulysses Hebron with a half-gallon jar, Frank Woods, of Bowie, was sentenced in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday to serve three years in the penitentiary. Two $50 fines were levied in the same court against Joseph Walters, of Lanham, and William Riggles, of Seabrook. Both men were arrested by Constable Warren Peake on charges of possession of liquor.

MISTAKE IN FAIRFAX SALARIES RECTIFIED

Supervisors Discover Cut of Last Week Did Not Agree With Law.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Fairfax 166.

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors, at the direction of its chairman, W. F. P. Reid, yesterday held a special meeting to rectify a mistake made in adjusting the salaries of two county officials at the regular meeting last week.

The board reduced salaries of Dr. F. W. Huddleson, county treasurer, and James U. Kincheloe, county revenue commissioner, to $4,500 a year. Under an act of the Virginia General Assembly, the board was given authority to reduce or increase the annual salary of these officials as much as 15 per cent, using the 1930 compensation of $5,500 as the base.

The reduction to $4,500, being more than 15 per cent, was in violation of the act, and the special meeting was called to agree upon a new figure. The salaries were finally set at $4,675 each. With the State reduction of 10 per cent taken off, the net compensation for next year would be $4,207.50.

The board adopted a resolution inviting the executive committee of the Fairfax County Medical Association to attend its next meeting on Wednesday. An attempt will be made to work out a schedule of county medical fees in treatment of poor families.

Members of Congress from Virginia were asked by the Fairfax Chamber of Commerce to aid in granting authority to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to acquire property in Virginia as is now being done in the District and Maryland.

It is expected that delays will be encountered in the expansion of public parkways around Washington, but it is believed the commission should be able to accept legacies or opportunities to acquire property or property rights.

A committte, with Capt. Thurlow White, of Baileys Crossroads; Robert B. Buckley, Fairfax; Joseph Berry, Vienna; Earl Saum, Cameron Valley, and Wells A. Sherman, of McLean, was appointed to confer on the county budget for next year.

A meeting of various charitable organizations throughout the county will be held today to open a special drive for funds.

Annual inspection of Boy Scout Troops of Fairfax County will be held tonight at the Annandale School. The public is invited.

An entertainment by junior pupils of the Fairfax Southern Methodist Sunday School will be held tonight.

Exile Offer Fails To Save Prisoner

Man Also Agrees to Sign Pledge But Is Given Seven Months.

Although he offered to sign the pledge and leave Prince Georges County for a year, if charges against him were dismissed, Charles Redmon was sentenced yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court to seven months for vagrancy.

Redmon's offer was made in a letter he wrote to Judge J. Chew Sheriff while in jail. Redmon said: "I have been lying here thinking what a nuisance I have been to you and the public for past years and I have come to the conclusion that I should take the pledge."

Charges of disorderly conduct against Redmon were dismissed by Judge Sheriff, but the prisoner was held for the grand jury on charges that he destroyed bedding and a window in the jail while he was imprisoned.

FRANCE DEFAULTS.

With frenzied enthusiasm a huge majority in the French chamber of deputies rejected the plan of the government to pay the December installment on the war debt to the United States, and forced the resignation of the Herriot ministry. There were outbursts of oratory and passionate denunciation of America's insistence upon payment of the war debt.

Now comes the aftermath, when both France and the United States must consider the situation resulting from France's default.

In his note of Dec. 8 to the French government, declining its request to postpone the December installment, Secretary Stimson said:

> The maintenance of these agreements in their operation pending due opportunity for analysis of all matters bearing upon your request for revision and its consideration by the American Congress and people still appears to us to outweigh any reasons presented for a delay.

France votes against the operation of the debt agreement, while requesting revision of the agreement. The debtor asks for generous consideration, and in the meantime destroys confidence in his good faith. He dishonors his own signature.

The President is released by France's action from his offer to cooperate with the French government in surveying the entire situation with a view to readjusting the debt.

The United States, before it consents to review the French debt, should require the payment of the installment due on Dec. 15, with interest. This payment would help to restore confidence in the good faith of the debtor, without which it would be idle to discuss the debt question.

It is expected that M. Herriot will organize a new ministry and remain at the head of the French government. He is confronted with much greater embarrassments than those with which he dealt before the vote in the Chamber. He warned his colleagues against isolating France, and against the breakup of the entente with Great Britain, and against the injury that would follow the repudiation of France's obligation. Now, if he should remain premier, he will be under a handicap in the effort to obtain a better debt agreement with the United States. It is inconceivable that the United States will enter into a survey for the purpose of readjusting the debt unless France deposits the amount that was due today. In the meantime other debtors will make progress toward readjusting their debts to the United States.

Although the British government went to great lengths in trying with France to maintain a united front against the United States in the matter of debt revision, the action of the French Chamber put an end to this co-operation. Britain's payment of the December installment is a rebuke to France, and is likely to give rise to the charge in France that Britain and the United States are acting in concert against France. The Anglo-French entente is badly battered by the turn of events.

The United States strives to maintain friendship with all nations, but it is evident that the maintenance of friendly relations with France depends upon observance of mutual obligations. France still owes the war debt. The United States will never cancel or reduce it under compulsion. Outright repudiation would be the greatest misfortune that could come to France short of defeat in war. This misfortune would not result from vindictive action by Americans, but from the collapse of French credit, the repudiation of debts owed to France by other countries, and the political consequences of universal distrust of French undertakings.

The United States holds the whip hand. By refusing the request to reopen the debt question with France until the December installment has been paid, the French government eventually will pay, because in that direction lie both advantage and honor.

BEER TAX INADEQUATE.

The hopelessness of trying to balance the budget by a tax on beer was made clear to the ways and means committee yesterday by Secretary Mills. Members of the committee are trying to persuade themselves that taxes of $5 per barrel on beer and 20 cents per gallon on wine would raise $230,000,000. But a careful estimate by Secretary Mills places the maximum probable revenue from the Collier bill during the first year at $150,000,000. Most of the taxes enacted last spring are producing less revenue than was estimated by the Treasury when they were under consideration. There is no reason to believe that Mr. Mills' estimate is too low.

Beer could be sold in 16 States immediately, and might be sold in 9 other States. But a considerable number of States will continue to forbid its sale. Others might tax it heavily and drive consumers to the existing home brew industry. There is no accurate manner of calculating the public taste for beverages that might be legalized under the eighteenth amendment. The one certainty about the whole movement to restore beer is that it can not be relied upon to bring the budget into balance.

There are indications that if a beer measure should be submitted to President Hoover as an independent proposition he will veto it. Even if such a measure should become law, it might be invalidated by the Supreme Court, to the great detriment of the Treasury. To predicate a balanced budget on such uncertainties would be inexcusable. The public is tired of such trifling when the credit of the Government and the confidence of business and industry are at stake.

Speaking of the urgent necessity of matching expenditures with revenue Secretary Mills told the committee:

> There is no more valuable contribution that can be made by the Government to the economic welfare of the Nation. It is beyond question the most important task to which the Congress should address itself at this session. Both parties unequivocally pledged themselves to this accomplishment.

Regardless of what may be the outcome of the beer bill, other revenue legislation is sorely needed, in addition to extensive economies. The House can not ignore this problem without violating the pledges that were made to the people a few weeks ago. These pledges can not be redeemed by the subterfuge of taxing beer. The ways and means committee ought to begin prompt consideration of other sources of revenue that will put the Government on a solid financial footing for the fiscal year 1934.

THE POSTAL DEFICIT.

Some progress toward bringing postal expenditures into line with receipts has been made, but the postal deficit still remains a dilemma. The fiscal year 1932 ended with a deficit of $152,246,000. Postmaster General Brown estimates in his annual report that the net deficit for the current year, excluding subsidies, nonpostal expenditures and the cost of postal service rendered to other departments of the Government, will amount to $80,000,000.

Two general steps toward balancing the postal budget were taken at the last session of Congress. First-class postal rates were increased to 3 cents, along with increases in parcel post and air mail rates. Postal employes, whose salaries absorb about 71 per cent of all the department's expenditures, were required to take payless furloughs. Expenditures this year will be reduced and revenue will be increased, but not enough to wipe out the deficit.

Postmaster General Brown advises Congress against further rate increases. He reports that there has been no "unexpected" diversion of business from the mails as a result of the higher rates. But it is apparent that the 3-cent stamp has driven many former users of the mails to supply delivery services of their own. To correct this tendency Mr. Brown suggests that the 2-cent rate be reestablished for local delivery. Such a reduction would doubtless increase use of the mails within each city, while the higher rate would be charged for letters carried beyond city limits where there is less competition with the postal service. It is entirely equitable to charge more for a letter that crosses the continent than for one that is posted and delivered in the same city. This proposal is not designed, however, to increase revenue.

Efforts to eliminate the deficit, Postmaster General Brown says, must be concentrated on reduction of postal expenditures. Yet it is difficult to effect any substantial economies without reducing postal salaries. The Government ought not to set an example in salary slashing, and it would be inexcusable for the Government to augment the ranks of the unemployed. Under these circumstances the postal department will continue to be a charge upon taxpayers until normal conditions are restored, even though it may reduce its deficit by economizing.

The experience of the Postoffice Department illustrates once more the difficulties that are encountered in any governmental institution of a business character. In prosperous times the people do not look with favor upon the earning of profits by a governmental agency. Congress nearly always insists that such profits be distributed in higher wages or reduced rates. Hence, a Government enterprise has no opportunity to acquire a surplus for a period of hard times, and it becomes a liability upon taxpayers when they are least prepared to support it.

Distribution of mail is essentially a governmental function, but the financial difficulties of the postal service certainly give no encouragement for the extension of the Government's business activities.

FIAT LAW REBUKED.

The emphatic decision of the Supreme Court that constitutional rights can not be set aside by a governor's decree will ring through Texas and Oklahoma like a new declaration of liberty. Chief Justice Hughes' rebuke was directed specifically at Gov. Sterling, of Texas, but it carries far-reaching implications into the neighboring State where Gov. Murray has a habit of calling upon the National Guard to enforce orders that have no sanction in law.

Gov. Sterling's arbitrary orders are bluntly denounced as "an invasion under color of State law of rights secured by the Federal Constitution." After the Texas legislature had passed a law giving the railroad commission authority to regulate production of oil, Gov. Sterling proclaimed "martial law" in several counties. Oil producers challenged the constitutionality of the commission's orders limiting production. An order restraining the commission from enforcing its regulations was granted by a Federal court. But Gov. Sterling ignored the authority of the court and sought to nullify its action by military orders of his own. "If this extreme position could be deemed to be well taken," says the Supreme Court, "it is manifest that the fiat of a State governor, and not the Constitution of the United States, would be the supreme law of the land."

An attempt was made to defend the action of Gov. Sterling on the ground that an emergency existed and that he had a right to use troops to maintain order and protect property rights. But the court found that "there was no military necessity which, from any point of view, could be taken to justify the action of the governor in attempting to limit complainant's oil production, otherwise lawful." Instead of protecting property rights, Gov. Sterling violated a fundamental right guaranteed to every citizen by the Federal Constitution. No State or State official can deprive a citizen of his property without due process of law.

The case did not turn upon the governor's power to declare martial law or to quell disturbances by the use of troops. The vital question involved was the governor's attempt to regulate by executive decree a citizen's use of his own property in defiance of the courts. This is such an obvious infringement of constitutional rights as to impugn Gov. Sterling's good judgment as well as the competence of his legal advisers.

It is well for the Supreme Court to denounce in vigorous language such infractions of constitutional rights. This decision will stand as a masterful reminder to governors that they have no authority to make themselves dictators, even though their States may be distraught by economic problems.

John Bull is scratching his head and trying to decide whether to stroke the impudent Persian cat or twist its tail and let it howl to the League of Nations.

Vice President Curtis learns that the bonusites don't want to shake hands with members of Congress. They just want to shake them down.

France pays a $20,000,000 installment on the high cost of acquiring a reputation as a repudiator. The more she pays the bigger the bill.

Beer as beer is not so bad, but as a revenue producer it is as uncertain as France.

Rain or any other form of water absolutely discourages red agitators.

But how can Congress avoid log-rolling if it is to prevent a log-jam?

WORLD MISCHIEF MAKING

From the Chicago Tribune.

The British government is again moved to protest to Moscow against the propaganda activities of the Communist Internationale in Great Britain and India. The protest will probably get as far as previous protests. The Soviet government will say that it has no control over the Internationale, which joke is as good as it ever was. There may be some temporary modification of the Communist agitation, but it will be only on the surface. The great machinery of mischief making will go on. This is not a time when its directors are likely to reduce speed. On the contrary. If communism can not make headway now it is not likely to when conditions improve, and to check agitation now would be to miss the greatest opportunity since the period of disorder immediately after the war to prevent conditions from improving.

A British member of Parliament recently called attention of the government to instructions from Moscow to Communist agents abroad which assert that "the world masses are now about to enter the second revolutionary phase—that of revolutions and wars," that universal war is now inevitable and not far distant, and that the Communist organizations are taking leadership of the unemployed.

The official press in Russia has published surveys of these activities throughout the world, including the United States, where credit is claimed for parades and street fighting, the control of the war veterans' movement and demonstrations in Detroit, Chicago and elsewhere. The advance of communism in China and India is described and Stalin is acclaimed as the head of the world revolutionary movement.

When the proposal to recognize the Soviet now pending in Congress is taken up it is to be hoped this phase of the question will be thoroughly presented.

A Symbol of Friendship.

POST HASTE.

Another French premier is out. Those deputies have the courage of their evictions.

The Paris chamber by a vote of more than two to one demonstrated French agility to nay.

Came the dawn, after that repudiation debauch, and France figuring how many times the debt payment will be lost through her debtors following suit.

It is not necessary for an outsider to do it; Premier Herriot rubbed it in that there was no question of France's ability to pay. But the deputies were more impressed with the students' parade.

England pays, though it may take an eighth of her gold reserve; France defaults, though her installment would not call for 1 per cent of her yellow hoard.

This grand national debt showdown may well prove to be the best thing ever to clear the ethical and numismatical atmosphere.

But coming back across the Atlantic, if the House thinks there is anything more important than balancing the budget it is going to have a rude awakening next year—and won't we all?

If the honorable representatives see any way to make ends meet without a sales tax and veteran cuts, they are already looking beery-eyed.

The McFadden impeachment resolution goes to oblivion, but the names of the eight representatives who voted for it will not be forgotten.

It is quite opportune that Senator Borah is so occupied with the waterway hearing he has not been drawn into the battle for beer.

What's in a name when a 2¼ per cent sales tax is a blight, but a 30 per cent beer tax a blessing? And if a 42 cent tariff on wheat is made effective how much of a sales tax will it be on bread?

The Brtish Parliament pats its government on the back for not associating with those untouchables, the Couldn'ts and the Wouldn'ts.

"New plan proposed for farm relief." This is a daily head that can be kept standing for the information of Congress until March 4, and then it can be used for the Seventy-third.

The United States retains its lead as the chief export Nation of the world and export loss is in exact line with the decline of both world trade and domestic business; so it must be the French default the tariff is responsible for.

Once in a while Uncle Sam gets a break in international matters. Japan bars him from participation in a Manchurian commission.

PAUL HUDSON.

KREUGER COLLECTION SOLD.

Two auctions, one of Ivar Kreuger's art collection and the other of Anatole France's, have revealed that the Swedish match king had a better flair for authentic old masters than for authentic stock certificates, whereas the esthetic Frenchman was more astute in the accumulation of money than in the selection of masterpieces, according to the Living Age.

Figures tell the story. The Kreuger collection brought about $112,000 and the pictures of Anatole France only about $12,000.

The features of the Kreuger collection included Courbet's "Self-Portrait with a Violoncello," which commanded the top price of 20,000 crowns; Raeburn's "Portrait of a Man," a Ruysdael landscape, Tintoretto's "Papal Ambassador," Rodin's statue of a man walking, and a Gobelin tapestry of Venus calling upon Neptune to save Telemachus.

A Nickel's Worth Seems Small Only to Those Who Expect Too Much

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE difference between realism and idealism is the difference between truth and make-believe.

The idealist does not see things and people as they are, but only as they are pictured by his too-generous imagination.

He is honest. He earnestly desires all men to be honest. And this desire prompts him to endow all men with an imaginary honesty matching his own.

It follows, as a matter of course, that he is imposed upon and victimized by every rogue who knows how to play the hypocrite.

In this particular the idealist is a victim, deserving pity, but in another he is an unfair judge whose fault is inexcusable.

Suppose, if you will, that you are an idealist whose untutored imagination pictures an ideal world.

You choose a friend who is neither better nor worse than the common run of men, and as usual you endow him with every known virtue and acquit him of all faults and imperfections.

Your imagination tricks you. The person it pictures does not exist. You do not love your friend, but an impossible ideal that you have created in his name.

And when your friend, in process of being his natural self, differs from the ideal you manufactured, you assume that he has changed or has been exposed and you complain bitterly: "I was disappointed in him."

So you were; but why blame him? He has been his natural self all the while. The fault is in yourself.

What right have you to make an ideal of another person and say: "Here, make yourself like this or I shall have no respect for you."

It is a childish business to go through life denouncing people because they are not as you wish them to be.

All people are interesting or amusing, and life itself is a good show when you learn to accept things as they are instead of judging the world by standards of your own.

Bread is no less valuable because you thought it would taste like cake.

If you expect the leopard to be free of spots, the resulting disappointment is not the fault of the leopard, but of your own ignorance.

POLITICAL COMMENT

Los Angeles Times.

If the Democrats in Congress wish to construct a partisan plan for reconstruction and repair, as some of them have indicated they do, they will have difficulty finding new material from which to build it. In his two messages, the President has left them nothing much but beer, and this foamy beverage is rather insubstantial material with which to work. As to beer, they are confronted by the same dilemma that was pointed out during the campaign; if they attempt to give the country beer that will sell, they will violate the Constitution; while if they authorize beer that might, by some stretch of the imagination, be called constitutional, it will not sell. This difficulty is being tacitly admitted. During the campaign there was much talk of a 2.75 per cent beverage; already the discussed percentage has been raised to 3.2 or more, while the estimated revenue has dropped even more than the alcoholic content has gone up.

Wheat Prospects.
Topeka Capital.

One of the large grain companies of Chicago points to encouraging prospects that nature will "do more to correct and adjust the law of supply and demand than man-made law," among other things reduced prospects of the Argentine crop, Russia's diminished acreage, poor condition and lower acreage of our winter wheat. So far as wheat is concerned this company concludes that "the first move of nature toward lessened production has commenced."

A rising wheat market might be the final force to end general depression, and not only agricultural depression. Wheat seems to have the best chance to start commodities upward. It will be the more effectual if it comes about by natural rather than by artificial causes, as this grain concern suggests.

Merely Temporary.
Indianapolis Star.

There is still a slip between the cup and the congressional vote.

As Usual.
Dayton News.

Now that Congress has rejected prohibition repeal, it looks as if there will be nothing for us to drink at Christmas time but beer and liquor.

Roosevelt and Congress.
Chicago Tribune.

Mr. Roosevelt, observing Mr. Hoover's turbulent experience with a runaway Congress, may very well hope that he will be in a position to do without a session of Congress early in his administrative experience. He is thought to be a much abler handler of legislative elements than Mr. Hoover proved to be, but even at that both he and the Nation may be the better off if it becomes unnecessary to start Capitol Hill in full career the moment he takes office.

Al Smith for Mayor.
Houston Post.

When the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt as President of the United States was announced, it was taken for granted everywhere that Alfred E. Smith would be selected for some post in the Roosevelt Cabinet. Predictions were many that he would be named Secretary of State or Secretary of the Treasury.

But Mr. Smith may not enter the Cabinet at all. Not because Mr. Roosevelt lacks inclination to choose him for a post, but because Mr. Smith may be called to another service closer to his home. Mr. Smith may be drafted to serve as Mayor of New York City a year hence. Before Mr. Roosevelt has completed construction of his Cabinet, it probably will be known whether Smith is to look forward to taking charge of the metropolis and straightening out its tangled affairs.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Beautifying Highways Found to Be Profitable as Well as Promoting Pleasure of Travelers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: So much has been said and written about defacement of the landscape along American highways that movements in all parts of the Nation are on foot to correct this condition. Campaigns have been started in many sections, as here in the District, to remove objectionable signs and other disfigurements from the roads, while programs for the more positive work of beautifying highway surroundings have been inaugurated in many States.

In New York the Southern State Highway, on Long Island; Bronx River Parkway and the Hutchinson Highway, in Westchester County, are fine examples of modern road building. They are broad motor highways, without intersecting traffic routes, so that it is possible to drive for miles on a road free from disfiguring sights and, on the contrary, lined with parked areas with the natural beauty of trees and brooks unspoiled. Such improvements add to the value of adjoining suburban property.

In North Carolina a popular movement has been started to rid the roads of objectionable objects. Not only civic clubs, but farmers and school children, have been called upon to help. Each division engineer is to be in charge of the beautification work in his territory. In constructing new roads engineers have been instructed to examine areas where clearings are to be made and mark for preservation trees that can be appropriately left to grace the roadsides.

Special care will also be taken in constructing roads to save such plants as wild honeysuckle, clusters of wild plum, nut, fruit and flowering trees, such as beech, hickory, holly, wild cherry, dogwood and others. North Carolina now exercises supervision over approximately 60,000 miles of roads. Its Highway Commission believes that beautifying the roads will be an important asset, not only to the State but in many cases profit to cities, industries and private cititzens.

F. PARKER.

People of America Lent Money to Allies, Confident It Would Be Paid Back.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When England came to America and said, "Our backs are to the wall," and France came saying, "We are bled white," this Nation was asked to "hurry up, for civilization is at stake, and we need help." The people of the United States, not the Government, poured out their savings, certain that both nations would repay the loans.

They had an agreement that each should furnish the other with anything required, on credit, and on that basis the United States supplied them to the limit. But, when we needed ships, in which to transport goods and men, England charged us top price and we paid the cash. When we wanted anything in France double prices were demanded, in many instances, and the price was paid, in cash. And all the time the currency of both countries was held at par by the gold eagles of the United States that lined their treasuries. Now, when the time has come on which each has promised on the nation's honor that they shall make a payment, on account, they whine about the size of the debt and stand at our gate with their tin cups asking that we make them a gift of the whole amount, as though it was an accommodation to our people to "buy bonds till it hurt."

Let them default, if they dare, to ruin their national credit in the eyes of the whole world and have all the nations cry "Shame!"

Skipper Mills in His Revenue Cutter Helps People Understand Finance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The American voter has been paddling around the edge of the sea of finance pretty extensively in the last few months trying to understand the currents and its ebb and flow.

Many of us are still timorous and diffident about expressing an opinion. It was when Capt. Mills came along on the radio and took us aboard his trim little craft that we felt an exhilarating sense of breathing the billowing billions with a skipper who knew his job. ELIZABETH KIRK.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE APPLE VENDOR.

The appleman upon the cornor worries me a lot.
I wonder if he sells enough to pay his rent or not;
I wonder if he lives alone, or has he children small,
And just how many apples he must sell to feed them all.

It's no concern of mine, of course; I've never learned his name,
I don't know where he goes to, nor from whence the fellow came,
And yet I never see him on the corner with his box
But I wonder how he stands it in those worn-out shoes and socks.

I wonder as I pass him what misfortune cut him down
And left him selling apples on some corner of the town;
And if his wife is grateful for the little that he gives,
And what he does on Sunday and just where it is he lives.

I wonder who his friends are, and is he what he seems,
Or a man of high ambitions in the wreckage of his dreams?
And has he wasted chances or done everything he could?
And a thousand other questions which I wish I understood.

WE still believe that there are a number of men more or less distracted over the idea of trying to find some suitable gift for—well, for whoever the fair lady might be—to whom this suggestion to give orchids is gratefully and joyfully accepted.

We know of no flower and little else which can compare with the orchid as a gift, and there can be few thrills comparable to opening a Christmas package revealing such loveliness as only this exquisite flower can claim. Remember, the orchid is never, even as a gift, just a flower—it is always a tribute and a splendid example of perfect taste.

Market Meanderings

By MILDRED REED BUNDY

Clement, of the Madrillon, an Artist; Unique Candy Boxes; Chocolate Snowmen; Christmas Greenery Makes Its Appearance.

IN the wanderings of the Market Meanderer three times each week she comes upon many persons who play unique roles in the food-selling world of Washington. So vitally interesting are these persons that to present them in short introductions to readers is to be the Meanderer's especial privilege. Thus, let her present Clement, of the Madrillon Pastry Shop, 1312 G street, truly an artist in shaping highly delectable concoctions, much enjoyed by those who have used his birthday and wedding cakes, party food, Christmas fruit cakes and other festive sweets.

Clement

Clement came to New York City from his native Italy more than twenty years ago. He became a baker's helper. He scoured pots and pans. He swept the scraps and crumbs which fall from master bakers' tables. His own ideas of spinning sugar first took form in a bunch of candy violets kept in a beer bottle in a dim corner of the bakery kitchen. Now he is proud holder of first honors in an international cake decoration competition and winner of a first prize in a local competition. And many a President has eaten Clement's cakes. Does the Meanderer need to extol him further?

Little trunks in brown suede finish that are exact replicas of Martha Washington's trunk are unique candy holders found in one of Washington's best-known candy shops, located on downtown Twelfth street. The trunk boxes hold a pound or more of candy. It frequently is of the kind intended for children, with dozens of clever confectionery trinkets in which this shop abounds, gathered under the trunk lid to surprise the youngster. Long after the sweets are gone the little trunk may serve as a treasure box for the child.

Candy snow men, sugar Santa Claus figures covered with tinsel paper. Christmas tree candy boxes, chocolate animals to hang on the tree, loli lipops galore, tiny gold-wrapped bits of candy resembling bags of gold, chocolate soldiers, chocolate tools in boxes, chocolate cigarettes and dozens of other Christmas novelties are glittering their Christmas message to the public from the windows of the above-mentioned candy shop on Twelfth street. For 35 years candies made by this institution have made Christmas merrier for Washington and for almost all other parts of the country.

California navel oranges of medium size, much wanted for Christmas, are recommended this week by the Market Meanderer. They cost as little as 20 cents a dozen in the retail section of the Southwest Market.

Ropes of Christmas greenery, made of graceful pine branches, known in Virginia and Maryland as "standing pine" or "running pine," sell in 5-yard lengths for 10 cents a yard in open market stands along lower Eleventh street southwest.

For Christmas cookery, particularly in salads, some delicious Spanish pimentos the Meanderer found in a Ninth street importer's shop will find favor. A 15-ounce can of the pimentos is only 25 cents, and 7-ounce can 15 cents. One clever hostess made a holly salad with lime gelatin, pimentos cut into berries for the holly design, and pickles formed into the leaves for the holly. The design was made in the bottom of the mold and the gelatin carefully poured over it all when the gelatin mixture was beginning to set.

High-quality white raisins for use in Christmas cakes, that the Meanderer found in the importer's shop on Ninth street, are excellent values at 15 cents a pound.

Large, handsome Christmas wreaths of English boxwood combined with the brilliant swamp berries are being used in many Washington homes. These wreaths are made in artistic fashion daily in a flower shop in a downtown market on K street. Great masses of poinsettias give their brilliance to the Christmas color in this market. The poinsettia plants sell for 50 cents up.

Baskets filled with choice fruits are being ordered by many shoppers as they check off their Christmas lists. In one of the highest class fruit markets of Washington these appealing baskets of fruit are assembled to order for $2 up. With the wealth of fruit on the local market from which to choose, the deft arrangement of the marketers and the brilliant cellophane wrappings and Christmas ribbons, the fruit baskets are indeed delightful choices for gifts.

Mike, a well-known gander, the mascot of the high-quality fruit and vegetable market mentioned above, is again taking up his holiday strutting among food shoppers. He causes much glee among the children of food-hunting mothers, and now and then halts a curious circle of adults.

Telephone questions about Market Meanderings to The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 52, and they will be promptly answered; or address the Market Meanderer, The Washington Post, inclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

THE PARADINE CASE

By ROBERT HICHENS

SYNOPSIS.

Sir Malcolm Keane, K. C., is asked by Sir Simon Flaquer, a noted English solicitor, to defend Mrs. Paradine, who has been arrested for the murder of her husband, who had been blinded in the war and had been decorated with the V. C. Sir Simon tells Keane that Mrs. Paradine is a beautiful Dane, who had been rescued from a life of degradation in Copenhagen by an American diplomat, taken as a servant to America and later made her way to England. She'd married Maj. Paradine after the war. He agrees to handle the case and becomes immediately intensely interested in it.

Sir Malcolm is happily married to Gay, but when he calls on Mrs. Paradine at Holleway Jail he feels the strange fascination of his beautiful client. He is worried because Lord Horfield might be named as judge in the trial and so deserves to be unfair to him. He and Gay give a little dinner party to which they ask Lord and Lady Horfield. After the party Sir Malcolm studies a photograph of William Marsh, Col. Paradine's valet, and the idea occurs to him that the man who acted in so intimate a relation to his blind master might have had an opportunity to kill him. His plan of defense begins to take form in his mind.

Gay meets a Swedish painter, Baron Sedelsward, at the Flaquers', and he invites her to a private view of his paintings. Sir Malcolm decides to go to the exhibition when he learns that Sedelsward was acquainted with Mrs. Paradine. He asks the painter to dine with him that night.

Judy Flaquer, Gay's friend, suspects that Sir Malcolm is neglecting Gay because of his abnormal interest in his client.

"OH, no, of course not!" said her father. "How could it be?"

"What a pity! I should have loved to discuss it."

"From the solicitor's point of view?"

"And the merely female point of view as well."

She lit a cigarette and sat down near him.

"Well, as it isn't the Paradine case, what is it?"

"The Paradine case," said Sir Simon, half humorously and half grimly.

"So you were hard at work on it when I came in?"

"I was, very hard at work."

Judith said nothing; just sat by him smoking her cigarette, which she had fitted into an amber holder. At last Sir Simon lifted a hand to his cigar and out of a cloud of delicate smoke said:

"Judy, strictly between our two selves, as solicitors and father and daughter, for this talk can't be entirely legal and the humanities are likely to intrude, this Paradine case is giving me trouble."

"And giving trouble to others, too," remarked Judith.

Sir Simon leaned forward.

"Let's be frank, Judy. Otherwise we're wasting our time. What does your intuition lead you to infer?"

"Even to you, papa, I scarcely like to breathe it."

"My life is spent in listening to the telling of secrets," said Sir Simon with simplicity.

"Even so, ought I to tell you another's?"

"Another's? Is it Gay's?"

"Perhaps not only Gay's."

"I briefed Keane for the defense of this woman, Judy. I wish I hadn't."

"But you believe in him as a wonder in defense, don't you?"

"Of course I do. But, well, Keane's a difficult fellow to handle; a difficult fellow to work with in certain circumstances. Of course, we're the best of friends, you know, but he's so tremendously emotional. At our last interview he sprung a surprise on me."

"Can you tell me what it was?"

"I will. Solicitor to solicitor, of course!"

"Of course!"

"It's a scheme for an audacious defense that's just occurred to him. Time is running short. Keane's to see me here tomorrow about it, in the afternoon. He wouldn't come in the morning. I don't know why. But he was very decided and hasty in refusing the morning. Tomorrow if possible we must come to a definite decision whether to use this defense or not. I shall have to agree to it or protest against it. And he's terribly hot on it. I can see that."

With transparent clearness and in the fewest possible words he outlined to her the defense that Keane had suggested.

"That's the line he wants to take," said Sir Simon, ending his expose.

"It's clever, audacious—very audacious."

"The question is, could we get a judge and jury to believe it? Horfield and a British jury? You've never seen this fellow, Marsh. She sticks up for him."

"But he is against her, isn't he?"

"Apparently dead against her. Yet she won't say a word against him. Why? That's what bothers me, as I told Keane, of course. Various suggestions spring up in one's mind. One I didn't—" he paused, seemed to hesitate—"well, the furnace seemed to be in full blast, the windows were shut, and I thought it wiser not to mention it at the moment. This fellow Marsh, Judy, is internally good looking in a very peculiar way, a mixture of the animal, panther, and the knight errant. A damned extraordinary blend. If you can imagine an animal in whose eyes at times there was an expression of fierce idealism you have it. Keane thinks he's a fanatic. That may be, I don't know. Anyhow he's marvelously handsome. He's a servant. She was a servant. It occurred to me—I've nothing to go on—that Mrs. Paradine may be in love with him."

"With the windows shut I understand why you didn't say that to our Malcolm."

"Ah?"

The exclamation sounded interrogative, but Judith didn't make any reply to it. After waiting, Sir Simon said:

"You're very cautious this evening, Judy."

"Am I?"

"Can't you bring yourself to be perfectly frank with me?"

"Solicitor-frank or mere woman-frank?"

Well, we might perhaps begin with the woman."

"Tell me something first then, papa. What is the real under-reason why you begin to wish you had never put this case into the hands of Sir Malcolm?"

"I think you know it, Judy."

"But can it be possible, after ten years of happiness with Gay, delicious Gay?"

"In man and woman isn't everything possible?"

"But has she such immense fascination?"

"For him I'm beginning to be afraid she has."

"Do you feel it?"

"With me it's not so much fascination—no! But she makes me like her."

"Like her?"

"Yes. I don't say that she isn't very deep. Sometimes I think she is, sometimes I think that, on the contrary, she's very straightforward. But however it is, there's something about her, apart from her beauty, that gets at you, puts you on her side."

"Then the jury will feel that?"

"Ah, but there's the judge. There's Horfield to reckon with."

"Lord Horfield is suceptible where women are concerned."

"Not always. And he's got cruelty in him. He takes likes and dislikes. One never knows."

"He likes Gay."

"You think so?"

"Yes, too much."

"It's odd," said Sir Simon, "but this Mrs. Paradine has, at times, a strange fleeting resemblance to Gay."

Judith's expressive dark face suddenly hardened.

"Really!" she said, and her voice sounded hard.

"Don't be rattle. Facts are facts, even though friendship is friendship."

"Where does the resemblance lie, papa?"

"I can't tell. But it's there."

"Has Sir Malcolm—have you ever spoken of it to Sir Malcolm?"

"Never."

"D'you think he has noticed it?"

"I should think so. There's a look—sometimes when Mrs. Paradine glances up suddenly sideways, for an instant I feel as if I were sitting with Gay. But she's much less ethereal, much more definite than Gay."

"Believe me, papa," said Judith with emphasis, "our ethereal Gay could be very definite if the necessity ever arose."

"Does she—do you think she has the least suspicion that——"

"Oh, papa," Judith exclaimed, springing up from her seat and going to stand by the fire. "Hasn't Gay loved Sir Malcolm with all her heart for more than ten years? The least suspicion! Of course she knows!"

For a moment her face was distorted, as if with anger.

"Do you mean that she has actually spoken of it to you?"

"Oh, no. But between women, such friends as we are, that isn't necessary. I feel in every fiber that she knows. Gay is terribly unhappy, papa."

"And it's my doing," said Sir Simon grimly.

"Your doing, but not your fault."

"No, of course not."

Sir Simon sat a little lower in his chair. His head seemed to set into his shoulders. There was silence in the big room for several minutes. It was broken by the sound of a light scratching. Judith was lighting another cigarette. Sir Simon looked up.

"Well, Judith," he said, "we've heard the mere woman speak pretty plainly. Now I want to have a word with the solicitor."

"At your service, papa," said Judith in a suddenly businesslike voice.

"How does Keane's theory of defense strike you?"

"First tell me! Do you think Sir Malcolm believes this man Marsh committed the murder?"

"He's absolutely convinced that Mrs. Paradine didn't. And Marsh had every opportunity to do it if he wanted to. He was perpetually about his master, did everything for him."

"And does Sir Malcolm think Marsh is trying to save himself at the expense of Mrs. Paradine?"

"It might be so. Suppose Keane's on the right track so far as this, that Marsh did commit the crime but not for his master's sake?"

"Then why, if he was devoted to his master?"

"Suppose he did it for Mrs. Paradine's sake."

"Do you mean prompted her her?"

"Or by the sight and understanding of her unhappiness with Paradine?"

"But then why turn against her now?"

"Mightn't he have turned coward when the deed was done? Mightn't his deed have been too much for him? Many men, on impulse, do things that they're not really up to. Such men suffer afterward from mental and moral collapse. They aren't equal to their own deed. You take me?"

"Yes, of course."

"Marsh may be one of these, and now to keep suspicion away from himself shows this hostility to her."

"But then wouldn't she fight him?"

"Depends on her character. A woman may do anything, or not do anything."

"But you say she stands up for him!"

"So far she does, in private, to us."

"So far?"

"Keane seemed to think she might possibly sing another tune presently. On the other side, knowing she was in Marsh's hands, if there's anything in my suggestion she might be trying to placate him and to get on his soft side."

"You mean that possibly both of them are driven by fear, he of suspicion coming on him, she of his giving the whole thing away if she showed the least sign of hostility to him?"

"It might be so. But I'm in the dark. Of one thing, however, I'm absolutely convinced, and I told Keane so. There is something between Mrs. Paradine and this fellow Marsh, and we haven't yet found out what it is."

"I wish I had a chance to see her."

"I wish it, too. But that's impossible, Judy."

"I believe I could feel the truth."

"I doubt it. I've seldom been more puzzled by a case. And now this dreadful complication is introduced into it."

"You mean—Sir Malcolm?"

"Yes. And the further complication of the enmity between him and Horfield."

"Well, but an English judge, papa!"

"I know; I know. Still, in practically every relation of life the human undercurrents play their part and have their influences. No man is free, entirely free, from these mysterious influences. Mind you, I don't for a moment doubt that Horfield on the bench has the clearest intention to be absolutely impartial. Nevertheless, I consider it would be better for us if this case were to be tried by another man. I'll say no more than that. And I wouldn't say as much as that to any living soul but you."

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

PANAMA is like . . . well, it is like Panama! It is as though a bit of Biarritz, a dash of Deauville, a good part of Cannes, and plenty of American cleanliness and efficiency were all jumbled up under the very nose of the fifteenth century church which looks onto the Plaza Cathedral with aloof and mildewed indifference.

Now I know where all the funny taxi horns went when they disappeared from Paris! They came to Panama, here to clatter and clack and whine in spine-chilling crescendos around the narrow streets of one of the oldest cities in the new world.

And the nocturnal swirling of swallows! Sitting on your galerea, sipping a . . . well, sipping, one suddenly hears a rustling and a whirring and a clatter like the sudden downpour of a tropical rain on the protesting fronds of the palms . . . but looking up, one sees a sight that for me at least never loses its novelty nor its ability to astonish. 'Tis the bedtime of thousands of swallows, which at a certain minute each evening, probably when they think the sun has just set, set up a concentrated chattering and whirring and darting that gives one a momentary impression that the birds have all gone suddenly and actively mad. The clatter and darting lasts but a few minutes, then where there was scarcely a sign of a bird before, now there is no sign—neither a whirr nor a cheep nor a whisper, not even a little bird-settling noise, gives the slightest indication that the trees in the Plaza are simply burdened with sleeping swallows.

Then one hears a familiar roar and looks up to see the "Panama Reporter," who claims each day in print that he leads "a dog's life" in this delightful place. One chats of Hollywood and bathing beauties, of Pasadena and poetry, of Paris, of the new swimming pool and the gorilicious "empinadas" at the Union Club, of what Will Rogers said to the Panama Reporter, who leads some dog's life, I should say! Where no furnaces get clinkers, or is it warts, where "the new moon has not had her heart pierced through at last by the higher flung spire of a taller building"—in short, a South Sea Island Paradise that would have made Gaugan caper with joy, Stevenson delirious with appreciation, and Mark Twain settle down forever in his inevitable white ducks to live without the minor irritations, which, all unsung, pepper one's nights and days in less well regulated and no more picturesque tropical cities.

A ride to Panama Viejo tonight at sunset, to gaze once more upon the still, defiant ruins of the old city of Panama which Morgan laid waste so thoroughly in his pursuit of personal gain that it was not considered worth rebuilding. Thence aboard a boat bound for another country, another city of history, another—just another going on and away . . .

Have you sent your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Post for this week's illustrated leaflet which tells you how to make Christmas Tree Ornaments from empty egg shells and tinsel and things? Better do, because you will like it—and it will help you to spread Christmas cheer for such a few pennies! There are little toys which you can make, too, that can either hang on the tree or be put in the children's stockings, and the directions for making all of these are in this week's leaflet.

Au revoir.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

IF YOU are the suave, soignee type, gloriously glamorous and can, to use a slang phrase, "get away with it," the beauty mart offers all sorts of fantastic things for you.

At a recent beauty show, one striking model with a youngish face and shiny silver hair, wore a sleek black dress that revealed a very svelte figure. Black and silver eyelashes strung on a tape were affixed to her own eyelashes. They were definitely artificial and blinkingly told the world they didn't care who knew it. The same model had her nails enameled in platinum, peppered with a few black dots. Again the effect was boldly and frankly artificial. A black and white polka dot (tiny, of course) effect can also be obtained by this special process for applying this polish. Both eyelash and nail polish makers stress these fantastic effects only for the unusual formal or theatrical functions, and the black and white, or black and silver nails and lashes may be "worn" with metal or black velvet, silk or satin pajamas or hostess gowns.

For a long time, the artificially long lashes have been in evidence, not only for special functions, but for daily wear. They came strung on a tape and ready to paste over the upper lid or may be attached singly to one's own lashes, one by one. In the latter process a special glue is used and the lashes are supposed to last through tears and washings, for several months. One by one the lashes will fall out, but, the makers argue, so do your own. For the average woman the "too long to be true" lashes do not seem to belong. But if one is especially beautiful, and wishes occasionally to look theatrical—well, what of it if it makes you feel good!

Nail polishes come in all colors of the rainbow, to match your gown, your eyes, your lips, anything you wish. There are even black polishes and deep green. Fantastic to the extreme. Those who can wear them at all, wear them with an air. But they are very few and far between.

At the same beauty show a model with golden blonde hair and a cameo face had an auburn streak painted through the front of her hair. Painted isn't the word, really, for it was done with a vegetable coloring that is said to wash right out with a single shampoo.

So much for the evening fads.

Then a wealth of new ideas. Ear protectors so water won't find its way into the ears when hair is shampooed or face sprayed.

And male manicurists, believe it or not!

THE REACTION TO THE NEW LAWS.

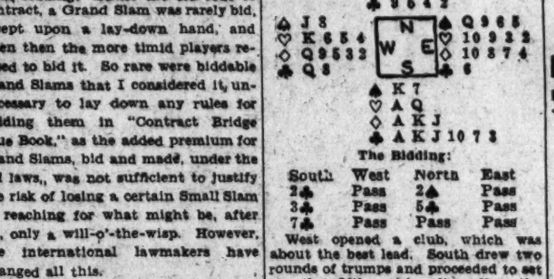
AS I predicted, when the new International code of laws went into effect there followed, as the night the day, an epidemic of Grand Slam bidding. Under the old code of Contract, a Grand Slam was rarely bid, except upon a lay-down hand, and often then the more timid players refused to bid it. So rare were biddable Grand Slams that I considered it unnecessary to lay down any rules for bidding them in "Contract Bridge Blue Book," as the added premium for Grand Slams, bid and made, under the old laws, was not sufficient to justify the risk of losing a certain Small Slam in reaching for what might be, after all, only a will-o'-the-wisp. However, the international lawmakers have changed all this.

Frequently the course of history has been changed by international statesmen through the writing in of an unconsidered section in the laws. The same thing might happen to Bridge players with the vast increase in the premiums for Grand Slams, bid and made, vulnerable and not vulnerable. Nowadays a player stands to win 2,250 points if he bids and makes a vulnerable Grand Slam, as compared with 750 points, the premium for a vulnerable Small Slam. If he is not vulnerable he receives 1,500 points, against 500 points for the Small Slam, and it is my observation and that of others that in consequence of this new legislation the bidding of Grand Slams has increased 1,000 per cent. In other words, there are now ten Grand Slams bid where before the adoption of the international code there was only one or more.

Let no one make the mistake of imagining that because the premium for Grand Slams is greater and there are more bids, all of them, by any means, are made. Human nature remains the same. Avarice exerts its potent influence, and many a player reaches out for a Grand Slam and fails to realize it in the play. The increase in the premium for the Grand Slam does justify the taking of risks in making it. It used to be a rule that the only time a Grand Slam should be bid was when the cards could be spread after the Opening lead, and the tricks claimed, but now a Grand Slam is not a bad gamble if it depends on the single element of a successful finesse or a favorable break in one suit. Players should loosen up their bidding just slightly because of the greater premium given for the making of a Slam.

Below is a hand on which the first vulnerable Grand Slam was bid at Crockford's Club, New York, where experts and leaders of society meet at the Bridge table.

South—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The Bidding:

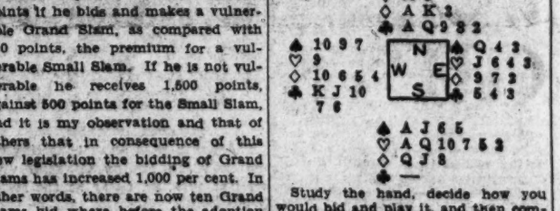
South	West	North	East
2♣	Pass	2♠	Pass
3♣	Pass	5♣	Pass
7♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened a club, which was about the best lead. South drew two rounds of trumps and proceeded to set up the fifth spade, discarding the Queen of hearts.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play of the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

South—Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it, and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

Gentlemen:-
We have been using your newspaper as an advertising medium, about every other week, over a period of the last seven years and we should like to take this opportunity to tell you that our advertisements placed therein have been unusually successful.
We keep a record of telephone calls we receive to pick up laundry and have found that during the weeks we advertised in your publication the number of such calls increased perceptibly. We believe this is due largely to the gracious consideration of your managers in placing our advertisements so very advantageously. And, too, we find that these decidedly gratifying results just mentioned have been obtained, considering the amount spent for advertising space, at a comparatively low figure.
We are immensely pleased with your newspaper and the returns it consistently assures us. In fact, the sole purpose of this letter is to tell you that we cannot commend you too highly as a reasonable, and remarkably fruitful means of advertising.
Sincerely,

INCREASED BUSINESS is the objective of all advertising . . . so when "increased business" is definitely linked with use of The Washington Post as indicated by the above letter, no theory of circulation or other factors can effect advertising decisions. . . . The Post is an economical advertising medium because a small appropriation will buy a greater percentage—more attention value—of the entire paper; The Post is most effective because its circulation is CONCENTRATED among the families who do the bulk of the buying—who spend the most for personal services—in Washington.

KOCHANSKI SCORES AT MUSIC MORNING

Miss Guiomar Novaes Also Is Well Received by Capital Audience.

Paul Kochanski, master violinist, and Miss Guiomar Novaes, pianist, were the artists at Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's sixty-second Musical Morning at the Mayflower yesterday.

Mr. Kochanski lived up to his reputation as a violinist in his interesting program, while Miss Novaes contributed her part to a really delightful concert. The audience manifested its pleasure again and again by demands for encores, which were liberally granted by both artists.

In the Bach group, with which Mr. Kochanski opened, he demonstrated his thorough grasp of this master in the "Partita E Minor," and an Allegro and Praeludium in E. Major.

Miss Novaes also chose a Bach prelude for her first solo, the lovely one in G minor, arranged for the piano by Siloti. The audience gave her an ovation at the conclusion of the second number, Scarlatti's sprightly "Caprice."

Mozart's "Andante et Rondo," with its opportunity for artistic phrasing and exquisite melody, gave Mr. Kochanski another notch on his instrument.

Ravel's "Habanera," Pergolesi-Stravinsky's "Serenata e Tarantella," and "La vida breve," by Falla-Kreisler, made a happy conclusion to Mr. Kochanski's solos.

Miss Novaes won applause in the amusing group of Children's scenes by Octavio Pinto.

Grete Stueckgold, Metropolitan Opera Co., soprano, and Andre D'Arkor, tenor, of the Royal Opera, Brussels, will make their Washington debuts at the sixty-third Musical Morning next Wednesday.

Bill for Amateur Boxing Is Favored

District Committee Also Passes on "Blue Sky" Bill in House.

The House District committee yesterday ordered a favorable report to the House on a bill legalizing amateur boxing in the District but prohibiting professional prize fights.

At the same meeting the committee agreed to report favorably the Bowman "blue sky" bill for regulation of security sales by the District superintendent of insurance. Representative Harlan (Democrat), Ohio, said the legislation is needed as "more fraudulent stock is sold here than in any other city."

Chairman Mary T. Norton said that both bills will be placed on the House calendar, but indicated they will not be called up in the House before January 15. She said no more committee meetings will be held until the second Wednesday in 1933.

Tango to Feature Ball of Democrats

Club's Membership Drive Winners Also Will Be Announced.

Miss Fay Rogers, well-known dancer, will be featured by the Young Democrats at the first winter ball Saturday night at the Willard Hotel. She will dance a tango.

The affair is the first of a series planned by the club, with Miss Eleanor Branson in active charge. Members of her committee include Miss Betty Mattingly, Miss Laura Barkley, Miss Marianne Harrison, Bradford Ross, Paul Kelbaugh, Ralph Lawrence and Homer Trum.

During the evening announcement will be made of the winning group in the membership drive that closed on election day.

Banquet Tonight Honors Rowe.

A banquet in honor of Mack D. Rowe, national Democartic organizer, will be held at Masonic Temple, Tenth and U streets northwest, at 8 o'clock tonight, under auspices of the National Progressive League and allied clubs.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

"GYNARA"—still pronounced "Cynara"—the magic lantern show previewed at Loew's Fox last Tuesday midnight, I am happy to report, is quite a picture.

It is a picture, incidentally, that will probably occasion an emphatic taking of sides by those who look beneath the surface and scrutinize a photoplay's theme and purpose. There is not much likelihood of occupying an amiable middle ground in appraising "Cynara's" basic idea—successful stage play, or no successful stage play. The moralists, in all probability, will condemn it heartily; the free thinkers will deem it a very grand document, indeed.

For "Cynara," if you have not already heard, propounds the simple question of whether or not a wife should condone her husband's admitted infidelities. The play, by the fine discretion manifested in its preparation, as well as by the naturalness and skill with which it is acted, must at once disarm those who seek a target for their moral preachments. There is not a blush, a cringe nor a shudder in the film's entire footage.

A husband and wife are parting, obviously for good and all. The wife is, quite as obviously, at a loss to understand what has wrecked the happiness of her married life, which for the preceding seven years had been ideal. By the simple process of the familiar flashback to the events leading up to the present situation, the husband makes clear exactly what happened while his wife was away from London attempting to save an impetuous younger sister from the evil consequences of her eager infatuation. The final argument seems to be that it is the duty of every wife to overlook her husband's forgetfulness of his marriage vows.

Strangely enough, the moot question—although why it should be moot is not precisely clear—of the double standard of morals is not involved. "Cynara" takes for granted the chastity of the wife. Probably because, as Augustus Thomas once argued in one of the later and more mature of his dramas, "upon the golden basis of woman's virtue rests the welfare of the world"—the idea being that the woman knows her child is hers, whereas the man only knows it is his through his faith in the woman. Which, of course, is a strained analogy, because in "Cynara" there is not involved the question of a child, but instead the suicide of a young girl who took a cowardly means of escape from a predicament into which she had no business getting herself in the first place.

However, it is not the purpose at this time to review "Cynara" minutely, but merely to indicate what an argumentative topic it presents and to suggest that by reason of the superb performances of Ronald Colman and Kay Francis and the wholly admirable support of the veteran Henry Stephenson and the youthful Phyllis Barry, it becomes at once a picture you will want to see.

The opportunity will present itself at Loew's Fox the week beginning Friday, December 23, the playing date having been moved up to Christmas week, immediately following next week's "Night After Night."

For those who look upon football as the most enthralling of the sports, the season is by no means over. By one of those modern miracles of enterprise, the complete game between Notre Dame and the University of Southern California, played last Saturday in the Memorial Stadium in Los Angeles, will be on view at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow in conjunction with the Warner Brothers' production of "Scarlet Dawn," starring Douglas Fairbanks, jr., supported by Lilyan Tashman.

Every play in the game was photographed by the Warner Brothers and those who have previewed the "rushes" on the West Coast are unanimous in their declaration that the film is the closest thing to actuality the screen has ever known—in this particular field of sport, that is.

Speaking of the Metropolitan reminds me that another Reri is about to burst upon the American theater world, according to late report.

Reri, you will, of course, recall, was the Tahitian imported by the late Flo Ziegfeld to add a few South Sea undulations to one of his camparatively recent "glorifications." Reri's real name, as I vaguely remember it, was Anna Chevalier. The latest of the exotic and undraped beauties to heave into view over the Southern horizon in Dasnee, heroine and star of "Goona Goona," completing its week at the Met today.

Dasnee is a Balinese, often referred, as Miss Ruth Schwerin would have us believe, as "the Clara Bow of Goona Goona Land," which you will agree is sumpin. This shy young creature had never been before a camera prior to the making of "Goona Goona" and, naturally, has never made a "personal appearance" tour of American movie houses. Negotiations are now said to be under way with some such end in view.

Reverting momentarily to Loew's Fox, latest word is that Belle Baker will return to the Capital to headline the vaudeville bill at the F street cathedral New Year's week, beginning Friday, December 30.

It will come as glad tidings to many in the Capital that Mrs. Joseph P. Morgan, wife of the former general manager of the Crandall theatrical properties in the Washington territory, has returned to her home in Morningside drive on the high road to recovery from an appendicitis operation performed in Garfield Hospital a week ago last Monday. Since Mrs. Morgan's ambitious young girlhood once contemplated a career as a nurse, she now doubtless has a fairly accurate notion of what she missed! And Joe and the Doberman-Pinscher are happy to have home again what they missed. A Merry Christmas all around!

There is a persistent whisper being bruited about that as the holidays draw near elaborate plans are being made for especially diverting novelties at the Arabian Nights ballroom, where Meyer Davis' Washingtonians are cooking up some stunts that will surprise Santa Claus right out of his white whiskers and red pants—or something!

While theatrical activities can hardly be said to be at their height during the week or two immediately preceding Christmas, there are still a few items to engage public attention in the early offing.

For example, on Saturday morning at the National Mrs. Clare Tree Major's Children's Theater Company will present Mrs. Major's dramatization of Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn," with all of the familiar figures of the book impersonated by professional players.

The same morning, out at Central High School auditorium—and the conflict with "Huckleberry Finn" is to be heartily regretted—the Student Orchestras of Wilmington, Del., will be heard in the first half of the National Symphony's program under the direction of Conductor Hans Kindler at 11 a. m.

The Montgomery Players are offering their second presentation of "The Donovan Affair" in the Rockville High School auditorium tonight and tomorrow night for the benefit of the Rockville Fire Department, having given it first last Saturday night in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

"The Nativity," a medieval church drama of the Yuletide, will be given in three of the city's churches, beginning Sunday afternoon at 4, in the Church of the Holy City, Sixteenth and Corcoran streets, by the drama group of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Leopold Stokowski will conduct the second concert of the season of the Philadelphia Orchestra in Constitution Hall Tuesday evening at 8:45 o'clock. The program will include Wagner's "Siegfried," Strawinsky's "The Fire Bird" and Strauss' "Tod und Verklarung."

"The Workshop," under the direction of Ruth Harsha McKenzie, will present its second program of short plays in Roosevelt Auditorium, Tuesday at 8.

In the motion picture theaters, the attractions for what is looked upon as the dullest week in the year will be as follows: Earle, George Raft and Nancy Carroll in "Under-Cover Man," and Sylvia Froos headlining the vaudeville; Loew's Fox, George Raft, Constance Cummings, Alison Skipworth and Mae West, in "Night After Night," and Lee Morse headlining the vaudeville; RKO-Keith's, Mary Brian, "Skeets" Gallagher and Greta Nissen in "The Unwritten Law;" Metropolitan, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Lilyan Tashman in "Scarlet Dawn;" Columbia, Jack Oakie and Shirley Grey in "Uptown New York;" Palace, Clark Gable and Jean Harlow in "Red Dust."

With the Coast Guard hurrying out to blockade that 66-boat rum fleet, it looks as if there might be plenty of eggs but no nog this Christmas.

Brother, could you spare a pint?

E. B. M'LEAN GETS DIVORCE IN LATVIA

Irregularities Are Seen by Former Publisher's Wife in Action.

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Riga, Latvia, Dec. 14.—A divorce was granted to Edward B. McLean, former publisher of The Washington Post, by the District Court of Riga today.

Mr. McLean was represented by Charles Henry Huberich, American lawyer handling international cases.

Nelson T. Hartson, one of Mrs. McLean's attorneys, when asked to comment on the report from Riga, Latvia, that Edward B. McLean had secured a divorce from his wife, Evalyn Walsh McLean, issued the following statement:

"I have been authorized by Mrs. McLean to release the following statement in her name:

"'Mr McLean is now in the American Hospital in Paris, where he has been under treatment for three months as a result of a complete breakdown. I am advised by my attorneys that Latvian divorce law requires the personal appearance before the Latvian court of at least one witness who can testify of his own personal knowledge to essential facts regarding the marriage of the parties. Obviously, Mr. McLean could not have been in Latvia personally at the time the divorce was granted, and so far as I know, there is no one in Europe who could honestly testify to the essential facts on which a divorce could be secured. From this it is apparent that if the report is true that a divorce has been granted in Latvia, a fraud has been perpetrated on that court. My lawyers further advise me that the injunction issued out of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia last year is still in effect. This order specifically restrains Mr. McLean and his agents and attorneys from prosecuting his Latvian suit. The granting of any divorce in Latvia is, therefore, in violation of our court's order and would not be recognized by the courts of this country. What steps I shall take, if any, must be decided on by my counsel.

"'This report, if true, is a complete surprise to me. Since Mr. McLean entered the American Hospital in September, I have been in constant touch with Dr. Edmund Gros, head of that institution. The hospital authorities have been under instructions from me to give Mr. McLean every care and attention that his condition demanded. The most recent reports from Dr. Gros have been that Mr. McLean is still a very sick man and would require the utmost care for many months to come. My information is that Mr. McLean is now and has been for at least three months in no condition to transact business or attend to his own affairs. From this it is clear to me that there is something decidedly irregular about the whole thing.'"

Rare Steel Articles Shown.

Legislator-Elect Guilty Of Attacking Minor Girl

Seattle, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—N. G. Robinson, 27, Democratic State representative-elect, was convicted by a supreme court jury today of an offense against Marjorie Rowley, who said she was 12 years old. The jury, which had deliberated about 24 hours, recommended leniency.

Robinson, in the county jail November 8 when reelected to the Legislature, was accused of attacking the girl October 7. She testified he picked her up in Woodland Park, where she was playing with other children, took her for a motor car ride and attacked her. Robinson denied the charge and said he would appeal.

POLICEMAN KILLED BY FLEEING THIEVES

Two Others Shot and Actor's Mother Is Imperiled in New York Chase.

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—In a $45 robbery, a policeman was killed today, two others were wounded and two women were forced to lie on the floor of a taxicab, bullets zipping all about them, as one of the thieves commandeered it in a chase that careened around the West Side of Central Park.

Both thieves were captured, and, within a dozen hours, indicted for murder.

Patrolman George Gerhard surprised the thieves as they fled from a cordial shop holdup. Before he could draw his pistol, they shot him to death. Six bullets plugged his body.

Trips on His Spats.

One robber, who gave his name as Ralph Marshall, tripped on his spats and was captured by one of the policemen who converged on the scene. Patrolman Louis Schmidt and Eugene Reilly were shot in the hand by the second robber as he jumped into a taxicab and forced the driver to speed up Central Park west.

There the chase began.

Another policeman, James Galligan, commandered a taxicab in pursuit. Schmidt joined him. At Ninety-second street and the park, the bandit forced his taxi to halt. He jumped out, started to cross the street. He hailed another cab, with two women occupants. Forcing the driver to jump out, the robber sped away. The women were the mother and sister of Milton Berle, stage comedian—Mrs. Sara Berle and Rosalin Berle, 19.

Bullets Pierce Cab.

Bullets pierced the cab as the police gained. The women crouched on the floor.

The bandit, turning half around as his automobile swerved up the Drive, fired over the heads of the women.

"When he'd look back and fire," said the daughter in describing her experiences, "I could glimpse his face. It was fixed, unchanging, and cold. Not cool, just cold."

Is Halted by Traffic.

Traffic across 109th street forced the robber to halt his cab. He jumped out and headed for a subway station. Police bullets had punctured his abdomen and he staggered and fell. He refused to tell his name. "Look it up in the finger prints," he said.

These identified him as William Vogel. Tonight, he lay near death in a hospital.

There was a touch of irony in the policeman's death. He had started for the cordial shop to warn a customer about a minor traffic violation.

Wife Seeks Embargo On Son's Plane Riding

Chicago, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—An amended bill of divorce which seeks to restrain Cornelius Smythe O'Meara, business man and aviator, from taking his 7-year-old son, C. Smythe O'Meara, jr., on an airplane trip to Paris was filed in Superior Court today.

The bill charged cruelty and said Mrs. O'Meara, originally of Columbus, Ohio, owned a 25 per cent interest in five oil corporations controlled by her husband. Attorney W. W. O'Brien said in filing the bill that O'Meara has threatened to take the child on an airplane flight from New York to Paris.

CHEVY CHASE ZONE CHANGE IS OPPOSED

Commissioners Get Advice But Still Seek Solution to Highway Problem.

A bitter wrangle developed at a public hearing before the District Commissioners yesterday on a proposed change in a highway plan, conditional on the rezoning of a small area in the vicinity of Chevy Chase Circle. The Commissioners took the matter under advisement with a comment by Maj. John C. Gotwals, Engineer Commissioner, that "you have given us much information but little help."

The proposal was to dedicate land for the opening of Oliver street between Thirty-ninth street and Connecticut avenue and of Thirty-eighth street between Northampton and Oliver streets. Preston Wire, building contractor, has an option to buy the land from Oscar H. Robey and H. H. Byrne on condition that the streets are opened and the area rezoned, so as to permit one-story commercial structures on Connecticut avenue between Northampton street and Oliver street and on the north side of Northampton street between Thirty-ninth street and Connecticut avenue.

The change was opposed for varying reasons by the Chevy Chase Citizens Association, represented by Edwin S. Hege, and supported by Mrs. Frank B. Noyes and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, as well as several residents of the involved vicinity.

Among the latter were Walter G. Dunlop, of 3752 Oliver street; Sidney R. Prince, jr., and Harold E. Doyle, representing Thomas J. Fisher & Co., realty agents.

G. W. U. Military Move Defended

Imperialism as Motive in Petition for R. O. T. C. Is Denied.

Charges of imperialism as their motive for petitioning the establishment of a Reserve Officers Training Corps at George Washington University were denied yesterday by a group of students who circulated a petition among the students.

A statement made public yesterday in response to a circular distributed around the campus during the last week denouncing the petition for the establishment of the corps, stated that their intention was to obtain the military movement at the school as an extra-curriculum.

The committee sponsoring the movement said yesterday that the circular denouncing them had increased their supporters among the students and that they now have enough student names to obtain the military unit at the school if the War Department consents.

Mining Congress To Convene Today

Senator Key Pittman to Be Among Speakers at Annual Session.

The Thirty-fifth annual meeting of the American Mining Congress will open at 10 a. m. today at the Mayflower Hotel.

Speakers will include Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada; S. L. Mather, president of the Congress, and Herbert Wilson Smith, of the Union Carbide Co.

Liquor Suspects Held For Jury.

Charged with transporting 100 gallons of alcohol, William I. Rhodes, 37 years old, and Thomas Quantrillo, 25 years old, were held for grand jury action under bonds of $1,000 each when they were arraigned in Police Court yesterday. The men were arrested at Twenty-sixth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S address at the laying of the corner stone of the new Department of Labor Building will be broadcast over both national chains this afternoon (WRC, WJSV, 2 o'clock).

Speakers during the ceremonies, in addition to the Chief Executive, will be Secretary of Labor Doak, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and James Stewart, president of the Stewart Construction Co.

The invocation will be delivered by Dr. John J. Burke, C. S. P., and the benediction by Dr. Abram Simon. The United States Marine Band will be heard during the program.

The placing of the cornerstone will be performed by the Masons of the District of Columbia. The new building is at Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue.

HENRY A. BELLOWS, of WCCO, Minneapolis, college mate of President-elect Roosevelt, who was in town yesterday, spiked the rumor that he may again be appointed to the Federal Radio Commission.

"I had not heard that my name was being mentioned in any way in connection with the commissionership," declared Mr. Bellows, who is a Democrat, "and, of course, any such mention is absurd, first, because I have not the slightest idea that an appointment would be offered to me and, second, because I would certainly refuse such an offer if it were made."

Mr. Bellows will spend most of his time in Washington after the first of the year, when he assumes the duties of Columbia vice president here.

"The Chocolate Soldier," the light opera that became successful by making fun of light opera heroes, is this week's radio choice of the Milton Aborn Opera Company for the Five Star Theater. It will be broadcast over WJSV at 10 p. m. Bernard Shaw's play, "Arms and the Man," was used as the story for "The Chocolate Soldier" and it was set to music by Oscar Strauss.

The singers who will appear in the cast tonight are Edward Nell, jr., Gladys Baxter, Vivian Hart, Roy Cropper, Hal Forde, Ann Carey and John Willard.

BARON MUNCHAUSEN received the following letter from an Oriental fan:

"Honorabl:

"With deep affectation I correspondence with you. Your radio speak very, very ridicule. Misus and I, myself laughter with hands hold sides from split. Very, very ridicule. The honorable Charles very, very good, too. Misus like him loads, which making me very, very zealous. All very funny. Much best of luck. Sincerely,

"WALTER T. WONG, Esq."

Olsen and Johnson will be guest artists with Rudy Vallee (WRC, 8 p. m.). Other talent to be presented during the hour will include Ethel Merman, star of the musical show, "Take a Chance;" Hal Skelly, stage and screen actor, and Ken Murray, vaudeville comedian.

Ann Harding and Leslie Howard will head the list of stage and screen stars who will be heard during the Hollywood-on-the-Air program over WRC at 12:30 a. m. Several scenes from the RKO picture, "The Animal Kingdom," which will feature the opening of Radio City during Christmas week, will be presented. Other members of the cast to be heard include William Gargan, Myrna Loy, Neil Hamilton and Edward H. Griffith, who directed the picture.

FOR her program tonight (WMAL, 8:30 o'clock) Frances Gutelius, pianist, has chosen the choral prelude, "Jesus Christ the Son of God" (J. S. Bach, adapted for piano by Walter Rummel); "Capriccio in B Minor" (Brahms), "A Flower to Me Thou Seemest" (Schumann-Godowsky) and "Waltz in C Sharp Minor" (Chopin).

Alice Hutchins Drake, radio chairman of the District of Columbia branch of the League of American Pen Women, will give the first of a series of three radio talks on the Biennial Exhibition of Oil Paintings recently opened at the Corcoran Gallery of Art (WRC, 4:30 o'clock) this afternoon.

Ralph Kirbery, the Dream Singer, who lives in Paterson, says the buses running on the New Jersey highways have grown so big that locomotives now halt at crossings to "Stop, Look and Listen."

JOHN CORIGLIANO, first violinist with Howard Barlow's symphony orchestra, will continue his interpretation of Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole," playing the fourth and fifth movements (WJSV, 11 p. m.). Among Mr. Barlow's selections for the orchestral portion of the program tonight are Intermezzo to Act II of Wolf-Ferrari's opera, "Jewels of the Madonna," a short piece; "Village Dance" (Burleigh); Borodin's "In Kloster" and "Entrance of the Little Fauns," from "Cydalise" of Pierne.

The National Business Hour on WMAL, at 6:30 p. m. sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, will present Representative Joseph B. Shannon, of Kansas, in a talk on "The Government in Competition."

WHILE Correll and Gosden's (Amos 'n' Andy) offices occupy a small portion of floor space in an office building, they are sufficiently comfortable, roomy and private. Some one spoke to the boys about taking more space and Andy remarked: "More room! Why, we're hunting for each other in this place as it is."

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

DRS. J. H. GIBBON and E. M. Landis report that when the blood vessels of the leg have good blood-carrying powers, putting the hands and forearms in warm water will cause a rise in the temperature of the skin of the toes. To prove this they had men sit quietly with their feet on stools in a room, the air of which was carefully maintained at an even temperature. When the skin temperature of the toes, carefully taken, registered 77 or under, the arm and hand were submerged in water at 113. In a short while the general temperature of the body began to rise. This, they thought, was due to the blood being heated in the arm and then carrying the added load of heat to all parts of the body.

Presently the temperature of the skin of the toes began to rise. Starting at 77 or below, it rose to 80 or above. If the temperature of the toes did not rise above the 80 level it can be accepted that the blood vessels of the feet and lower legs have less than the normal carrying capacity. The test should make it possible to estimate the condition of the blood vessels of the lower legs in chronic diabetes. If the vessels are in good condition, gangrene is improbable and greater liberties can be taken. If, on the other hand, the temperature of the toes does not rise, the margin of safety is narrow. If the case is one of Buerger's disease or of Reynaud's, the ability of the skin to react to heat and cold is well worth knowing.

Perhaps some day this kind of research may tell us why some persons complain so much of cold feet. Now we say they are poor heat makers, but that is not very definite and does not mean very much. More knowledge as to what is underneath the symptom and the discomfort it 'causes may lead us to some methods of correction.

St[illegible] Continue Advances As Street Becomes Cheerful

France's Default Ignored in Trading; Sales Total 1,014,284 Shares.

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Far from being upset by the antipayment vote of the French deputies, stocks rallied today and closed from fractions to about 3 points higher in most instances.

Possibility of an immediate default by France had recently been taken into account here, for it was apparent that the Herriot ministry would have difficulty in lining up the deputies. Actual news of the decision may have dampened sentiment a little, since stocks sold off moderately at the opening, but Wall street quickly assumed a more cheerful attitude and shorts, veiwing the market's dullness on the decline, decided to cover. Final prices were around the highs and the closing tone was strong. Sales totaled 1,014,284 shares.

Banking and brokerage opinion, in the main, held that immediate debt uncertainty had at least been lifted. The broader outlook, it seemed, was that the whole question was thus being brought nearer a real solution. Commentators generally made much of the fact that Great Britain had decided to pay, even though she believed a reconsideration of the problem was necessary.

Stocks, on the average, gained a point net. Undoubtedly the market's technical strength had much to do with the improvement and enthusiasm did not run particularly high, but the list's ability to maintain the upward trend of the past ten days or so could hardly escape notice, especially since trade news was negative. Rails fell a little behind utilities and industrials; in the last-named group oils softened when one important company cut midcontinent crude quotations. Coppers made scant response and motors were just steady.

The United States Steels, American Can, Westinghouse, Du Pont, National Biscuit, American Tobacco B. Case, United Aircraft, Southern Pacific, Santa Fe and Union Pacific were up 1 to 2 net, while American Telephone and Allied Chemical bettered that range. Standard Gas, Columbia Gas and North American helped the utility division to make the day's best showing. Montgomery Ward, Sears-Roebuck, General Electric, Chrysler, Pennsylvania and New York Central gained fractions.

Stocks.

A livelier advance marked trading in stocks as dealers refused to be upset by France's default. The average gain was 1 point, although some issues added 3 points. Sales volume mounted to 1,014,284 shares.

Bonds.

Prices of bonds sagged in spite of a decided advance in United States loans. The average loss was one-tenth of a point. The turnover went up to $10,548,000.

Curb.

Cheerful activity distinguished trading on the curb, and most leaders closed higher. The turnover climbed to 230,000 shares. Utilities scored advances.

Wheat.

Grain markets turned to other exchanges for inspiration and closed higher. Selling at Winnipeg depressed trading somewhat, but wheat, corn and oats maintained strength. December wheat sold at 44¾ cents.

Cotton.

Advances of more than $1 per bale enlivened trading. The general market gained 23 to 26 points. March contracts sold at 6.15. Liverpool reported a narrow market with some selling.

FOREIGN MARKETS.

(Associated Press.)

London—The approaching holidays and the uncertainty over the international outlook offset the effect of the American acceptance of the British debt note. Business was moderate, but a good tone prevailed. Indian bonds were strong and gilt-edged securities and gold mining issues were steadier while other sections moved irregularly. Rentes were easy due to the political situation and the market closed quiet.

Paris—The reaction of the bourse today caused by the cabinets registered moderate declines. International shares in most cases held steady. The closing was hesitant.

Berlin—The French debt decision was an adverse factor on the boerse and prices sagged irregularly. A slight recovery took place late and the market closed fairly steady.

CURB PRICES CLIMB IN BUOYANT DEALING

Utility Issues Cheered by Gains; Sales Rise to 230,000 Shares.

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—The Curb Market today enjoyed its most active trading since November 11, approximately 230,000 shares changing hands, at a slightly higher price level, against 180,000 yesterday.

Te utilities were buoyed by the gain reported in last week's electric power production, which, while small, was greater than recorded in the corresponding 1930 and 1931 periods and was interpreted to show considerable ability of this trade index to resist the usual seasonal decline of business.

Electric Bond & Share and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore gained about a point. Niagara Hudson Power, Cities Service and United Light & Power "A" were steady. American Gas & Electric pushed through 31 for a gain of more than 2 points.

The oil and mining shares were under moderate pressure. Gulf, Humble and Standard of Kentucky yielded fractionally, while Standard of Indiana gained a shade. Newmont was driven down a substantial fraction. Roan Antelope, which encountered considerable selling yesterday, rallied fractionally.

Thinness of the market was shown in the sharp gains of some inactive specialties. Great Atlantic & Pacific ran up 3 points on small turnover. Quaker Oats jumped up more than 5. United Aircraft preferred gained more than 6.

The Ford issues declined a shade. Swift & Co. moved up slightly, while Swift International dipped more than a point.

Electric Power Production Is Increased During Week

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Electric power production statistics showed some improvement last week.

The National Electric Light Association reported today that output for the week ended December 10 totaled 1,518,922,000 kilowatt hours, an increase of about 8,000,000, whereas a year ago virtually no gain had been registered. The decrease from 1931 was 9.1 per cent, compared with a drop of 9.8 per cent in the previous week.

The Atlantic seaboard was 7.4 per cent under 1931 against 7.7 per cent in the week ended December 3; New England alone showed a decline of 5.4 per cent against 7.3; central industrial region, 11.1 per cent against 12.3, and Pacific Coast, 7.7 per cent against 7.9.

GOODS MARKETS.

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Moderate buying of staple and semistaple cotton goods is reported at low prices. Gray cloths are steady with trading quiet.

BOND MARKET SAGS AS U. S. ISSUES RISE

Federals Stage Best Gains in Months; Sales Up to $10,548,000.

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—While United States Government securities zoomed upward today in one of their best sessions in several months, other sections of the bond market, shying nervously at war-loan defaults, were unable to make any progress.

The sales total advanced to $10,548,000, par value, of which more than $3,000,000 was accounted for by Federal transactions. The Associated Press-Standard Statistics average for 60 domestic corporate bonds was one-tenth of a point lower.

Traders and investors apparently were in some doubt as to just what economic and political reactions might be expected from the nonpaying attitude of Belgium and France, although announcement that Great Britain would tomorrow remit her debt installment in gold somewhat offset the continental refusal.

Most Liberty and Treasury loans were strong throughout, their renewed demand being attributed partly to the accumulations of private and institutional funds seeking safe outlets and to the belief that England had made private purchases of the Treasury 3s and 3¼s for use in the war loan payment. Six of the Treasury issues advanced fractionally to new highs for 1932, while the 3¼s and 3s were up 3-32s to 10-32s of a point each. More than 840 of the 3s changed hands.

Foreign obligations were particularly heavy until the last hour when support helped several hard-pressed issues. Some of the Belgians and French were off a point or more before rallying slightly. British 5½s were steady, but losses were recorded by some of loans of Argentina, Australia, Denmark, Finland, Germany and Italy. Bonds of Cuba, Norway, Poland, Queensland and Japan improved.

A number of the domestic rails, utilities and industrials recovered earlier declines, but not sufficiently to aid the averages. There was a heavy turnover of Baltimore & Ohio 4½s at a gain of 1¼ points. U. S. Rubber 5s gained 4 points. Most of the oils eased.

French Cash and Bonds Weaken on Debt Stand

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—French currency and French government dollar bonds weakened in the New York markets today as an aftermath of the debt vote by the Chamber of Deputies.

Francs sagged to 3.90 3-16 cents, off ⅛ point, although they did not quite touch their post-stabilization low, made yesterday. Sterling, on the other hand, was firm, up nearly a cent.

French Government 7½s per cent bonds lost about $12.50 per $1,000 obligation and the 7s dropped nearly $10. Both sold rather actively.

Stocks, after early hesitancy, firmed and closing prices ranged a dollar or two higher after a quiet session.

COTTON PRICES GAIN ON TRADE'S BUYING

March Closes at 6.15 as General Market Rises 23 to 26 Points.

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Cotton advanced more than $1 a bale today on trade buying and covering or :e-buying by early sellers, who appeared to be influenced by reports of continued light offerings from the South.

The favorable action of the stock market in the face of the French war debt default was a factor in the advance. March contracts, after selling off to 5.86 at the start, advanced to 6.16 and closed at 6.15, with the general market closing very steady at net advances of 23 to 26 points.

After opening at 4 to 6 points lower, the market steadied.

Continental selling was reported, some of it being attributed by some brokers to liquidation of old long cotton held for French accounts.

Offerings Are Small.

These offerings, however, were comparatively small, and the market turned upward on a continued demand from the trade and covering. Houses with Liverpool connections also were buyers here.

In the late trading all months sold above the 6-cent level for the first time this month, with January advancing from 5.73 to 6.04, and May from 5.96 to 6.27. Closing quotations were at or within a point of the best for the day.

Liverpool cables reported a narrow market there, with some local selling on the advance in sterling. The census report, showing domestic consumption of 503,722 bales for November, against 425,228 bales last year, was without apparent effect on the market here. Exports today, 11,581 bales, making 3,622,493 so far this season. Port receipts, 50,022 bales. United States port stocks, 4,895,143 bales.

WHEAT VALUES RISE IN GENERAL UPTURN

Trading Suffered Slightly as Selling Hit Winnipeg; Other Grains Up.

Chicago, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Unstirred by refusal of France to pay on her war debts, grain markets today turned placidly to other price-making factors and scored an advance.

At no time did Chicago wheat values today show a decline of more than a fraction of a cent a bushel. Late strength of the New York stock market was credited with helping wheat upward in the late dealings.

With most operators here awaiting the Washington Government final report tomorrow on 1932 domestic crops, and with trade lacking volume, wheat closed firm at the day's top level, unchanged to ⅜ up; oats, unchanged to ¼ off, and provisions, unchanged to a rise of 17 cents.

Selling at Winnipeg.

Transient slight setbacks in the Chicago wheat market today were associated with reports of unusual selling pressure at Winnipeg and Liverpool. Much of the Winnipeg selling was reported to be of a stop-loss character and due to uneasiness of rural holders of Canadian elevator storage tickets. Under this influence and also apparently affected by evidence of competition from Argentina in European markets, Winnipeg prices were the lowest ever known, and European quotations too were all at about record bottoms.

Some alleviation of wheat strain at Winnipeg was ascribed to supporting activities by Canadian government-sponsored agencies. It was asserted in advices from Winnipeg that export purchasing in Canada had been inadequate to offset in full degree the effects of distressed selling. Meanwhile, predictions of another cold spell in domestic winter wheat territory Southwest were current, and there was also talk that wheat prices were now on a below-cost basis.

Corn and oats swayed with wheat, sagging early and rallying at the last.

COST ACCOUNTANTS CHAPTER INSTALLED

Capital Unit Is Organized at Meeting in Mayflower; Members Enrolled.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Washington Chapter, No. 45, National Association of Cost Accountants, was installed at the Mayflower Hotel last night as the local unit of a group of controllers, auditors, business executives and economists interested in the study and interpretation of business data.

Taking the theme, "Tomorrow's Accountant," Eric A. Camman, of the firm of international accountants and auditors, Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., laid the background for the topic by showing the evolution of financial statements from the simple form of business report used by banks in granting credit, through the maze of detail and complicated records, to the statement used for Federal income taxation, the credit extension report and the uniform financial statement used by industries, or required as a prerequisite for listing on a stock exchange.

Charles Reitell, of the Greater Pennsylvania Council, Harrisburg, who is now engaged in the simplification of governmental accounting and budgetary control, spoke authoritatively on one of the newer and present-day uses of modern accounting, the design of records that will control the expenditures of moneys, the uses of business facilities and show accountability through responsibility.

Steuart C. McLeod, national secretary of the body, explained how the association through its chapters, publications and divisions of library and research, has anticipated the needs of accountants in business, industry and the governments, both State and Federal, and acts as a clearing house of accounting ideas and methods.

Charter members of Washington Chapter are Wroe F. Alderson, in charge of distribution cost research, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce; James E. Steel Ingot Production Drops to 15 Per Cent

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Steel ingot production has dropped to 15 per cent of capacity, from 16 per cent a week ago, Iron Age said today.

Most industrial activities, except automobile manufacture, are slowing down as the year-end approaches, and steel operations between Christmas and New Year may be almost completely suspended at many plants, the review asserted.

Carlin Named G. W. Captain At Banquet

1933 Gridiron Leader, Injured This Season, Failed to Play.

Fenlon Most Valuable; High Tribute Paid to Slaird.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

LEE HOWARD CARLIN, 23-year-old half back from Joplin, Mo., who didn't play a lick of football all season because of a broken shoulder-bone suffered at training camp, was singularly honored last night when letter men of the triumphant 1932 George Washington football team named him to lead the Colonials on the gridiron next season.

Carlin's election was the crowning feature of a brilliant gathering of G. W. alumni, faculty, friends and players at the Mayflower Hotel to give honor to the collection of burly football players who pulled the school's colors out of the mire of mediocrity and hoisted them to unprecedented heights.

The course of the new captain will be an arduous one. The most ambitious schedule ever attempted by a local school is being formed by the school's athletic department. Already it includes Clemson, Auburn, Tennessee and Tulsa, while the remainder of its games may be chosen from such institutions of football learning as Temple, Washington and Jefferson, Florida, Colorado Aggies, Louisiana State and others. All of them may be home games, with Friday night being once more favored.

Fenlon Most Valuable.

Little Johnny Fenlon, looking quite meek in mufti as compared with the unquenchable firebrand who plunged like a thunderbolt and swept ends like a phantom last season, was awarded the Omicron Delta Kappa trophy as the most valuable player to his team by Steele McCrew, representative of the honor fraternity.

Walter Slaird, tackle, was eulogized by Coach Jimmy Pixlee as the best tackle he has ever coached, and the otherwise taciturn grid leader was almost as unstinting in his praise of the nine remaining seniors who ended their collegiate careers last Thanksgiving.

Two other unexpected rewards were the Pearson and Crain trophy to retiring Capt. Wayne Chambers and a plaque presented to Jack Dishman, alumnus, for his work in resuscitating G. W.'s football hopes.

Judge Tate Real Pinch Hitter.

Judge Hugh M. Tate, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, a graduate 30 years ago of the University of Tennessee and since then its most ardent champion, spoke in place of Col. Paul B. Parker, director of athletics of the Volunteers, and in words of Toastmaster Dr. F. A. Hornaday, 1907, proved to be one of those rare pinch hitters who came through with a hit. Other speeches, lauding players and outlining hopes and plans for the future of G. W. football, were made by President Cloyd Heck Marvin and Gilbert Hall, while a little group of former G. W. captains told of the past, outlining some of the difficulties under which they labored back in the days when a quarter back was no better than his burnsides.

LETTERMEN.

Varsity—Wayne Chambers, captain; Arthur Kriemelmeyer, Walter Slaird, Frank Blackistone, John Fenlon, Fred Mulvey, Robert Galloway, Joseph Carter, Wallace Wilson, Ras Nielsen, Kermit Stewart, Hardy Pearce, Finis Parrish, William Parrish, John Baker, Edward McCarter, Tross Dike, Boyd Hickman, Christopher Doose, Burrell Steele, Henry Strayer, Joseph Edward, and Bernard Pacelson, manager.

Mrs. Dreyfuss Heads Directors of Pirates

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Mrs. Barney Dreyfuss, widow of the long-time owner and president of the Pittsburgh National League baseball club, today was elected chairman of the board of directors at the annual meeting of stockholders, held in Jersey City.

William Benswanger was reelected president and treasurer, and Sam Watters again named vice president and secretary.

CONSUMERS VS. SHOLLS.

The fur should fly at Central tonight at 8:30 when the Griffith Consumers and Sholls fives meet. The latter, playing as the Saks Clothiers last season, met the Consumer twice and the two split even. Both have the same personnel and will do some tall hustling to capture tonight's rubber game.

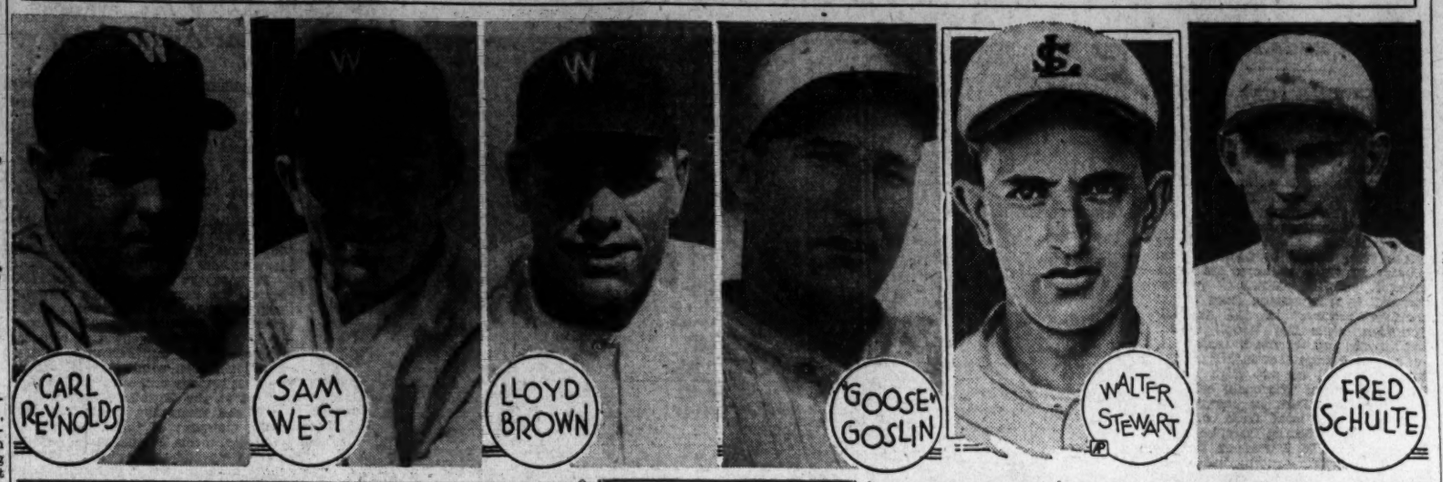
SIX PLAYERS TO CHANGE UNIFORMS IN WASHINGTON-ST. LOUIS DEAL



G. W. MEETS MISSOURI TONIGHT

Giant Colonials Due Real Battle on Tech Court.

COLLEGE basket ball goes big time tonight at Tech High gym at 8 o'clock when George Washington University's man mountains entertain the University of Missouri, Big Six champions, in about the most ambitious intersectional court game ever attempted here.

And while G. W. is pitting its vast height and shooting efficiency against one of the most renowned defensive teams in the college court business Georgetown will be putting the finishing touches on the team it will throw on the Tech floor tomorrow night against Duke. Incidentally, G. W. will take on Duke the following night at Tech.

Although verbally displeased with the manner in which the assortment of giants and pygmies conducted themselves against Shenandoah last week—and have been conducting themselves in practice against the secondaries this week—Coaches Pixlee and O'Leary plan no change in the combination which carried G. W. to unprecedented heights in basket ball last year and threaten again to do so this year.

Big Boys to Open Battle.

And so it will be the old combination of Wick Parrack (6-foot-5) and Forrest Burgess (5-feet-9), forwards; Ty Hertzler (6-foot-5), center, and Capt. Otts Zahn and Wayne Chambers (both of them 6-feet-1), guards, who will open the night's labors. Ox Wickham, 250-pound (6-foot-5) center; Bill Noonan (6-foot-4), guard and center; Johnny Fenlon, peppery little guard, and Lee Carlin, rapidly improving guard, seem to have the best chance of breaking into the lineup.

Missouri probably will start Johnny Cooper and Bernie Passer, forwards; Capt. Norman Wagner, 6-foot-3 center, and Ken Jorgensen and Denver Miller, guards. All are veterans. How much their long train rides hurt them remains to be seen. They played in Indianapolis against Butler last night, meet G. W. tonight and Washington University in St. Louis Saturday night.

The announcement was made in a message from W. Don Harrison, graduate athletic manager of Pitt, who is in Los Angeles preparing for the Panthers' game with Southern California in the Rose Bowl.

Addition of Centre completed Pitt's 1933 schedule, which includes games with Washington and Jefferson, West Virginia, Navy, Minnesota, Notre Dame, Duquesne, Nebraska and Carnegie Tech.

Greenleaf Nears Eleventh Cue Title

New York, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Ralph Greenleaf, defending the title he first won in 1919, today moved one game nearer his eleventh national pocket billiard title with an easy 125 to 15 triumph over Bennie Allen, of Kansas City, a champion when Greenleaf was still in knee trousers.

It took the 33-year-old champion just 13 innings to win his fifth consecutive game of the tournament. The defeat was Allen's third in five starts.

In a battle between the two cellar position occupants, James Mills, of San Jose, Calif., won his first game in seven starts by turning back Walter Franklin, of Kansas City, 125 to 71, in 18 innings. The defeat was Franklin's seventh straight setback.

Frank Taberski, of Schenectady, N. Y., a former titleholder, gave young Jimmy Caras his first defeat tonight. The score was 125 to 88, the match going nine innings. The defeat of Caras left Ralph Greenleaf, the defending champion, as undisputed holder of the tournament lead.

C. U. QUINTET PRESSED TO WIN, 28-22

Augusterfer Leads as Maryland Normal Five Bows.

DRAWING away from its opponent after being held to a 15-to-13 score at half time, Catholic University inaugurated its basket ball campaign last night with a 28-to-22 victory over Maryland State Normal, of Towson, Md.

Showing vastly improved form over their last appearance in Washington, when they were soundly beaten by American University, the Towsonites unfurled a brand of teamwork that for a moment threatened to overcome the more individualized play of the Cards, but they never quite caught up with the team that led them to the tape.

The two teams waged a ding-dong battle throughout the first half, but returning for the second half, the Cardinal cagers, led by Augusterfer, left forward, and Galiher, center, pulled into a lead which they refused to surrender.

Augusterfer carried off high-point honors with five field goals and one foul, while Galiher found the hoops for 10 points.

Wheeler, center, led the attack for the visitors, with 8 points.

Notre Dame Gets Noisy Welcome

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 14 (U.P.).—Notre Dame's vanquished football team returned home from southern California today and received a noisy welcome from 3,000 students and South Bend fans.

Making the trip from the campus to the station in a long line of chartered street cars, the entire student body, headed by its 80-piece band, jammed into every available inch of room in the station's lobby to cheer the players.

Each of the players carried a special box of California-grown fruit and nuts, the Christmas presents of their University of Southern California opponents. All of the players insisted that the Trojans have a great team and that the game was one of the hardest fought they have ever been in.

Neither Coach Hunk Anderson nor Athletic Director Jesse Harper returned with the squad. Harper stopped at his Hutchinson, Kans., ranch for the holidays. Anderson remained in California to take a few days' rest and to see the Georgia Tech-University of California game Saturday. Anderson will return late next week.

NATS OBTAIN WHITEHILL IN TRADE

Give Tigers Marberry in Straight Player Transaction.

was dangling the highly touted figure of First Baseman Harley Boss before the eyes of Billy Evans, general manager of the Cleveland Club, and concrete developments are expected in a few days.

The Indians have been casting longing looks at Boss, who, with Chattanooga last year, was a standout among minor league first basemen. Boss would be doubly welcome to the Indians in view of the unreliable Ed Morgan, now playing the position, but with Griffith already having added a ranking pitcher to his staff, Cleveland doubtless is being asked to give up a catcher, probably Glenn Myatt.

Joe Judge Trying to Place Himself.

Another development that may leave its mark on the Washington roster is the apparent permission given by Griffith to Joe Judge to make any deal that is advantageous to the veteran first baseman. Judge was in consultation today with Manager Max Carey of Brooklyn, who deferred action while awaiting the result of a deal with the Giants, now "on the fire," which may bring to Brooklyn the promising Sam Leslie, New York first sacker.

All of the four players acquired by the Nats are expected to take regular places in the line-up. Whitehill and Stewart will be welcome additions to the staff, which was overburdened with right-handers and boasted only the departing Lloyd Brown and the unreliable Bob Burke as southpaws.

Fred Schulte will be immediately inserted in center field to replace Sammy West, while it is expected that Goslin will not go back to his former field post, but will flank Schulte in right field, with Heinie Manush playing left.

Whitehill Impressive Last Season.

Whitehill compiled an impressive record of sixteen victories against thirteen defeats with the second division Tigers last year, after successful seasons in 1931 and 1930. In the latter year, he ranked third behind Grove and Walberg among the southpaw pitchers, winning thirteen games in one streak. He is famed for being particularly effective against the Yankees, the team which the Nats and the baseball world in general regard as the club to beat for the pennant.

Marberry's record with the Nats last year totaled eight victories against four defeats, but arm trouble forced him from the line-up frequently. After a poor start, Marberry recovered his form to finish the season in brilliant fashion, pitching a one-hit game that lacked being a no-hit performance when the first batter connected safely.

Government League Lines Up 7 Teams

Managers interested should phone Vic Gauzza.

BRAVES PAY $60,000 FOR ROOKIES

Giants - Robins Deal Brews; Umpires Facing Cuts.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—While the American League stole today's trading thunder, three National League clubs, the Boston Braves, New York Giants and Cincinnati Reds, announced deals for minor league talent, although the long-heralded and much-ballyhooed swap between the Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers failed to materialize definitely.

The Braves, having rejected bids from the Giants for a star pitcher in exchange for Frank Hogan, catcher, disclosed the purchase of two star young infielders of the Mission Club of the Pacific Coast League for the startling sum of $60,000 in cash and Bill Walters, a third sacker. These high-priced acquisitions are Albert Wright, second baseman, and Dick Gyselman, third sacker, both around 20 years old and touted as coming sensations.

Reds Do Marketing In Minors.

Cincinnati, finding it difficult to make headway in major league circles, purchased Clarence Blair, infielder, from Los Angeles, and Outfielder Irving Plummer from the Wilkes-Barre Club of the New York-Pennsylvania League. Blair formerly was with the Chicago Cubs.

All the Giants had to announce after a busy day was they had obtained a shortstop, John ("Blondie") Ryan, from Buffalo, of the International League, in exchange for cash and Eddie Marshall, utility infielder, but there was still talk that the New York and Brooklyn clubs would get together. Ryan formerly starred at Holy Cross.

Umpires to Feel Pay-Roll Ax.

With player salaries due for additional trimming for 1933, umpires also will feel the effects of the major league pay roll ax. After a session today, William Harridge, president of the American League, said the salaries of all umpires would be cut for 1933 and John A. Heydler, the National League's chief executive, indicated his staff of arbiters might be reduced.

The American League will retain its limit of ten umpires, but two veterans will be dropped to make room for a pair of newcomers, Willi Summers and Louis Kolls, formerly with the International League.

The American League, at the joint meeting with the National League tomorrow, will sponsor a proposal to permit individual pennant winners to sell world series tickets henceforth as they desire, either singly, or in the blocks of three, as has been the custom. The block system was found a handicap by the New York Yankees last October and resulted in emergency permission by Commissioner Landis to sell single-game tickets.

2 Southpaw Hurlers Added to Nat Staff as One Departs.

Goslin and Schulte to Add Strength to Club Batting.

Special to The Washington Post.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—Owner Clark Griffith, in a trading mood, performed two face-lifting operations on his Washington Ball Club today and tonight that will alter the appearance of the Nats' 1933 line-up in two positions in the outfield and two places on the pitching staff.

Big league baseball's trade-winds blew in a veritable gale about the Washington club's headquarters at the annual major league meeting, transporting Outfielders Sammy West and Carl Reynolds and Pitcher Lloyd Brown to the St. Louis Browns in exchange for Outfielders Goose Goslin and Fred Schulte and Pitcher Walter Stewart. An unspecified sum of cash also accompanied the Washington players to St. Louis.

A few hours later, on the heels of this trade that startled the baseball world, the big blow of the trading session did not subside until it had deposited Pitcher Earl Whitehill, of the Tigers, on Washington's doorstep, where he was gathered in in exchange for Pitcher Fred Marberry, who terminates nine years of continuous service with the Nats.

Goslin Back to Capital To Roost.

So Goslin goes back to Washington. The "Wild Goose of the Potomac" goes back home to roost in Griffith Stadium, where for ten years he was the slugging idol, a hero in two world series; back home after a two-year term with the Browns to whom he was traded in 1930 in a deal that brought Heinie Manush and Alvin Crowder to the Nats.

The Nats parted with fielding

GILBERT AND MILLS RIDE "DOUBLES" AT JEFFERSON PARK

Day's Honors Are Even In Mud

Quatre Bras II Wins Feature, Gilbert Up, at $21.

Mills Still Trails by 2 Winners; Battle Nears 200.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 14 (A.P.).—The great riding duel between young Johnny Gilbert, of Kansas, and Hank Mills, of Colorado, moved on toward the mark of 200 winners today with no change in the relative positions of the rival jockeys. They each scored doubles today, giving Gilbert 193 winners so far this year and Mills 191.

Mills added a little more to his laurels today as he brought two mounts home in the show positions in addition to his winners, but Gilbert brought in a long shot, Quatre Bras II, in the featured event.

Protractor, with Mills up, set the pace in the early going through the mud, but Gilbert held Quatre Bras II close to the pace and came up on the outside in the stretch to win by a head. Rip Van Winkle took second, beating Protractor by a head.

The winner rewarded his backers at the rate of $21.80 for $2 in the mutuels and ran the six furlongs through the rain in 1:13 flat.

Gilbert Winner By Nose.

Before bringing Quatre Bras II in, Gilbert scored on Southland Lad, which beat Nisia by a nose in the opener. Triple threat took the show close by. The winner lacked early foot and was among the trailers while Triple Threat and Dandy Dan vied for the supremacy. Southland Lad struck his stride in the last 3 furlongs and closing steadily caught Nisia in the last nod. Triple Threat and Dandy Dan were used up and faltered in the closing furlong.

"Ride 'Em Cowboy" Hank, on Bright Chestnut, led the long shot Vonair across the line by two lenths, while Thistle Tom was an easy third in the third race. Mills rode with good judgment, saving plenty for the finish while racing Little Marcelle into defeat in the first 5 furlongs. Vonair finished like a wild horse on the inside, but Bright Chestnut was safely home at the time.

Mills rang up his double in the sixth race, piloting By Gracious, the first horse to carry E. R. Bradley's silks at the meeting, to an easy triumph. By Gracious was energetically handled, being kept right with the pace to the turn for home, where Mills went to work on the Bradleyite and took a safe lead from Newgro, which was beaten two lengths. Cousin Judy was third.

Woods May Return as Frosh Coach; 2 Squads Busy.

BASKET BALL, boxing and echoes of the football season occupied attention at Maryland University yesterday. Distribution of letters was made to varsity and freshman football players, and a strong hint that Al Woods, veteran blocking back who concluded his collegiate year this year, would return next year as freshman coach.

The basket ball team is being worked very lightly by Coach Burton Shipley in order to nurse its many injuries. Rufus Vincent, regular forward, is recuperating from a bad shoulder received in the football campaign, while Roy Yowell, center and forward and Warren Evans, guard, are suffering from foot injuries. The first game will be two days before Christmas, when Wisconsin will be met at College Park in one of the most ambitious local frays of the

The Old Line boxing team, coached by Lieut. John W. Harmoney, former West Point boxing captain, has listed five opponents. It opens its season January 9 against Washington and Lee, at Lexington.

AT THE POST

with Bill Bennings

DEAR AL: JEFFERSON PARK, DEC. 14.

Some of the wise boys are doubling on Mills and Gilbert until they hit and are making real money. These riders stand out here more than Pat Remillard did at Marlboro last summer. They add many lengths to each horse they parade to the post. Both have their groups of backers. When they bring winners back to the judges' stand it reminds of the "amateur nights" at the old nickle movies with the rooters trying to outdo each other in handing out the applause. Got back in the two-winner class yesterday with St. Jim and Bright Chestnut. Sinking the ship today on Drombo. BILL.

FIRST RACE—BROAD AXE shares top weight with several contenders and is sharp as a tack in the kind of going on tap. May present the boys with a little surprise party tomorrow at generous odds. CHICKLERO is certainly the one to beat. PRINCE RENO gets in light and, should he draw Calvert for the riding assignment, I'd take him to give the top pair a battle.

SECOND RACE—INFINITY probably will go to the post the favorite unless there's more of that unnatural betting on Mills and Gilbert. Gets my call. HAMBURGER JIM becomes a substantial sort of a wager in mud and so does PETABIT.

THIRD RACE—JUSTINA will appreciate the soft footing and may sail home ahead of these. Clockers have been reporting favorably and the stable has shown signs of wanting to do a little cashing. TOMBEREAU and PRINCIPIO appear best of the others.

FOURTH RACE—SIZZLING is at home in the off-going and from where I sit there seems little to keep this Blondin filly off the top of the heap. OTTIE M. and LE MINISTRE might square off in the battle for the place award.

FIFTH RACE—It all simmers down to whether or not DROMBO can mud it. This colt is untried in competition over the track that seems to be the order for tomorrow. However, that Chance Play—The Cherokee II breeding seems to indicate that mud is no hindrance to his chances. I won't repeat what I've said about DROMBO. Just get aboard. ENNIS and ODD STAR for what's left.

SIXTH RACE—EVELINE F. ran Starboard Light to a nose decision in the slop here last month in a game exhibition. That race repeated should take care of these. BLACK PATRICIA for the place ahead of DEEMSTER.

SEVENTH RACE—DUELIST earns his oats on this kind of a track and the 8-year-old has served notice that he's in shape. PACHECO and BILL SETH appear to be the ones to beat.

(Herewith is the nineteenth of The Post's series of golf articles by professionals of the Washington clubs.)

By FRED McLEOD,
Columbia Country Club Professional.
As Told to Dave Herman, Post Staff Golf Writer.

IN playing my shots out of traps and bunkers I have found the mashie niblick to be my most effective weapon. It is exceptionally light. My pet mashie niblick was used for 25 years, and it was a trusty iron, one that hoisted me out of danger in thousands of cases. About 18 months ago I discarded this old hickory club, which became too light, and in its place I had a duplicate of it fashioned with a new steel shaft.

You will probably want to know why I prefer the mashie niblick. Well, I have never used a niblick in traps, and can not see its advantages in such a spot. There was a time in my golfing career when I even used a mashie in shooting out of traps. The mashie niblick has served me best because it is a bit lighter than the ordinary club. You can swing it faster, and speed is required in a trap shot. On the other hand a heavy niblick will retard the speed.

Plant Feet Solidly In Sand.

In going into the trap, always remember to bury or plant your feet firmly and solidly in the sand. This naturally prevents any slipping. In addressing the ball keep the club face wide open, and the feet apart about a foot. I use an open stance, which enables me to get the natural cut on the ball. The ball is played parallel with the left toe.

In playing my pet cut shot, I aim to the left side of the hole. If played properly the ball should break from left to right. Now in playing a shot with the ball lying cleanly in the trap, see that the left arm is in control. Don't get off your feet. There is a little pivot in the trap shot and the weight should be evenly distributed throughout. Meet the ball with the club face wide open. This enables you to get the necessary cut and back spin.

The wrists will take care of themselves. Keep the left arm comfortable, not rigid. You should not feel the slightest strain or tightness from the moment you bring your club back to the follow through, which should take care of itself if the ball is hit right.

In the explosion shot, try to play down into the sand. It is only natural that the shorter the shot the more sand you will scoop, but the sand can be struck as far as 5 inches behind the ball.

In playing a trap shot 100 yards from the green, reverse the club head, turning it in. Do this only provided you have a good lie; otherwise, you will have to explode.

Never worry about getting in the traps. To me playing out of such spots is as much a pleasure as teeing off. Have no fear. Concentrate on the shot. I have discovered that most golfers are afraid to take a cut at the ball in the trap. Don't try to "baby" the ball.

Perhaps my way of playing a trap shot is different from other golfers, but I might state that my friend, Bob Barnett, of Chevy Chase, plays my trap shot just as well as I do. Fine examples of trap shot players are Gil Nichols, Walter Hagen, Johnny Farrell, Tommy and Sandy Armour.

GOSLIN IS REGAINED BY NATS IN TRADE

strength to add hitting power in the St. Louis deal. Sammy West's fielding brilliance will glitter no more for Washington, but in Fred Schulte the Nats have obtained a reliable center fielder, whose wallops outdistance West's and who gives the Nats one more man who can "break up a ball game."

Manager Bill Killefer, of the Browns, pointed out after his deal with the Nats that he is, seeking youth in the rebuilding of his club and in the matter of age the advantages of the trade lie on the side of St. Louis. In exchange for Stewart, 32 years old; Goslin, 31, and Schulte, 28, the Browns receive three players each 28 years of age.

In Walter Stewart, the Washington Club has acquired the southpaw who has been the Nats' particular nemesis of recent seasons and a pitcher whose record with a perennial second-division club has often reached brilliance. In 1930 Stewart won twenty games with the Browns while losing twelve. His record last year was fifteen won and nineteen lost. He was a seven-year man with the Browns, slight of build, with a deceptive delivery.

Lloyd Brown has never had a losing year since joining the Nats in 1928, when he won four games and lost four. Last season he won fifteen and lost twelve, but for the past three campaigns has been valued chiefly as a spring pitcher. His work in the later months of each season tailed off.

The Nats part with one of the game's most brilliant ball hawks in Sammy West, whose center field play in Griffith Stadium and foreign pastures has been sensational since he became a regular with the Washington Club in 1927. He reached his high spots at bat in 1930 and 1931, when he batted .328 and .333, but last season he faded badly, hitting only .287, and showing a former weakness against left-handed pitching.

Schulte Fair Sort Of Hitter.

Schulte, slated to be West's successor in center field, batted .294 last year after hitting .304 in 1931, but his clouts were of longer proportions than West's. He is a comparative giant of 6 feet 2 and 175 pounds, and a home-run hitter of parts. His fielding is below the caliber of West's, but he has never been regarded as a weak sister on the defense.

The return of Goslin to Griffith Stadium will revive the old chant of "Come on, Goose," with which Washington fans a few years ago exhorted the Nats' prime slugger to lift the ball over his favorite right-field fence. Goslin, despite the fielding deficiencies of his early seasons with the Nats, was a favorite with local fans. His defensive play in past years has improved greatly and the deadly arm which failed him three seasons ago is in best fettle. Goslin batted only .299 last year after hitting .328 in 1931. His lifetime average is more than .325.

Carl Reynolds compiled a respectable average of .305 after being out of the line-ups six weeks as a result of a fractured jaw when Bill Dickey, of the Yankees, swung on him in an emotional outburst in July. Reynolds, obtained in a five-player deal with the White Sox last winter, started off the season as one of the league's five leading hitters, but was unable to sustain this pace and dropped below .300 in the last month of play.

COX BATTLES McMILLAN TONIGHT

Former Musician to Show Mat Wares at Auditorium.

RASSLING gains some precious dignity tonight at the Washington Auditorium when several of the college boys and a musician of some note make up a card which is featured by a meeting between the newly crowned king of the villains, Jim McMillan, and "Gentleman" Joe Cox.

McMillan only recently has attained his villainistic reputation, being once quite a hero just after leaving dear old Illinois.

Perhaps the most interesting rassler on the card is Dr. Karl Sarpolis, who meets Tiger Nelson in one of the 30-minute preliminaries. Dr. Sarpolis is a registered dentist, a violinist of some caliber and has, upon several occasions, been conductor of touring musical comedy orchestras which have played at the National Theater.

In the remaining bouts Joe Narocki, claimant of the Polish championship, meets Everett Marshall, one of the up-and-coming boys. Willie Davis, former Southern Conference wrestling champion, while at V. P. I., meets old Joe Stecher, former heavyweight champion, and Abe Coleman ups and meets Frank Judson.

The boys will commence their nose-tweaking promptly at 8:30 o'clock, and women fans, accompanied by paying escorts, are admitted free of charge.

BOXING AT CONGRESSIONAL.

Tonight's boxing matches at the Congressional Country Club, one of the features of the stag affair in honor of Joe Cronin, new Nat manager, will find the following in action: Al Dintaman vs. Nick Transpernto, Will Kpauf vs. Nay Palmer, Marion Barnes vs. Dallas Palmer, John Borrazio vs. Billy Howard, Charles Barranco vs. Herb Vermillian, Cy Williams vs. Jack Baxter, John Fortuna vs. Lee Crandall.

THE ONCE OVER

H. I. PHILLIPS

HOW ABOUT A CHANGE IN GOLF RULES?

THEY change the rules of football every year, alter the baseball regulations every now and then and revise the boxing code every time a restless official turns over in bed, but the rules of golf go on forever. What's the idea? Let's have a change. The game needs debunking.

* * * *

A few suggestions:

1. It shall be illegal for any golfer to carry more than four clubs. (It's the other six that cause all the trouble.)

2. All precedents shall be disregarded and all rules revoked regarding funereal silence during play, and it shall be considered legal, ethical and perfectly okay to chat, chuckle and otherwise behave during a drive or putt as if golf were a sport and not a major operation or a memorial service.

(Note—If a baseball pitcher can survive the rigors of three hours in the box with the fans shouting, and if eleven football players can function fairly well with 50,000 maniacs yelling, "Block that kick!" a norma human being should be able to hit a little white ball on the nose even when somebody coughs.)

3. It shall be ethical for three members of a foursome to sing or yodel when the fourth member is driving, if the mood impels them.

(Note—The major trouble with golf is that there is too little opportunity for a good-natured gent to be himself. A careful study of the drives made on 3,507 golf courses during 1932 indicates that they couldn't have been much worse if made during a performance of Prof. Schickerzapf's Swiss Yodelers.)

4. The use of score cards shall be prohibited.

(Note — Scientists, humanitarians and philosophers agree that score cards are chiefly to blame for the brain fatigue, nerve strain, heartbreak, despondency, physical deterioration and spiritual depression so inevitably tied up with any 18 holes.)

5. No gambling on the game shall be allowed.

(Note—If the club feels that its members should have an outlet for their speculative temperaments it shall equip every third tee with quarter in the slot machines, various wheels of chance, dice, cards, &c.)

6. All handicaps shall be abolished.

(Note—The club handicap is conducive to widespread personal dishonesty and cooperative fraud. It is a well known fact that even Diogenes used to hold back his best scores, and that the heads of six of the country's leading schools for character building would rather cut off their right hands than perform with a handicap lower than 20.)

7. The custom of having one cup on each green shall be abolished and at least four cups put on each. It shall be permissible for a golfer to putt for the cup nearest his ball.

(Note—Let's give everybody a break and admit there is such a thing as luck.)

UNDERSTANDING PROF. EINSTEIN.

Prof. Einstein is purposely taking a boat which will take 28 days to land him in the United States. He says he abhors haste. If we knew we were in for nothing more than an examination in higher mathematics when we reached port, we'd take our time, too.

JOHN D.'S REAL REASONS.

John D. Rockefeller, now at his Daytona Beach home, is hiking a mile a day this year instead of playing golf. He can't afford to lose new balls in times like these, and it would have a bad influence on recovery if he used repaints.

Bandits robbed a movie house the other day while the picture was being shown. Probably all the patrons were asleep and the robbers kept awake by keeping their backs to the picture.

This department's nomination for the Man of the Month is Mayor J. Foster Terry of Southampton, Long Island, who demands that the Government cancel its $110,000 appropriation for a new postoffice there. The mayor, supported by other town officials, says the old postoffice is good enough. What's the world coming to?

Assault Suspect Held For Grand Jury Action

Arrested by a rookie policeman whose suspicions he had aroused, Daniel E. Lee, colored, 27, yesterday was given a preliminary hearing in Police Court on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon upon Miss Eleanor Hutson, 20, of 5806 Colorado avenue northwest, and was held under bond of $2,500 for the grand jury.

Lee, police said, waited until Miss Hutson alighted from a street car at Fourteenth steet and Colorado avenue and grabbed her. He dragged her into a nearby alley, threatened her with a long piece of iron pipe, and robbed her of about $15. He was arrested within ten minutes, and was shortly afterward identified by his victim.

TRAFFIC TOLL

TO DATE.

Powerful headlights not focused to the proper angle with the surface of the roadway have been the cause of numerous accidents.

There is a courtesy rendered by some drivers who realize that their own headlights might impair the vision of an approaching car. That is by dimming their lights. On most cars the headlights can be focused either strong or dim. However, these drivers are few and far between.

Take your car to a garage or any place that regulates the focusing distance of headlights and have your lights adjusted. The cost is negligible and there is the possibility that by doing this you may some day avoid an accident.

The accident figures are still climbing. They are:

Deaths	72	116
Injuries	3,350	3,610

"Be Careful!"

ACCORD ON TRACTON MERGER LACKING AT 2-HOUR CONFERENCE

Roberts Renews Opposition to Measure Now Pending in Senate.

The citizens' joint transportation committee yesterday afternoon conferred for two hours with People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech as to their differences of opinion on the proposed merger of the street railways, but they apparently were no nearer agreement at the close than at the beginning.

At the suggestion of the committee Mr. Keech and William Roberts, special counsel of the Public Utilities Commission, will confer on the issue within the next few days and will then meet a subcommittee of the general committee in a further effort to reach a united view on the controversial questions.

Mr. Roberts yesterday insisted that he had not changed his position on the merger issue from his original stand, which is in accord with that of the commission, as of last year. He stated that he still favors the enactment of some merger legislation, but he does not approve the present bill, now in the Senate, in its entirety.

Universal Transfers.

He declared that he still holds that the commission should control the power sales, that the merged company should not be permitted to organize numerous subsidiaries and that he was opposed to universal transfers. If the joint civic committee indorses the present bill in all particulars, he said, he is not in agreement with its stand.

Until the organization of the transportation committee the impression prevailed that Mr. Keech and Mr. Roberts were in agreement on all of the major merger issues save that of universal transfers. Mr. Keech has not wavered from his former stand.

The committee has gained the impression, however, that Mr. Roberts has indorsed its proposal wholeheartedly.

Reiterates Objections.

Mr. Keech yesterday reiterated his objections to the merger bill which passed the House and stated emphatically that he would prefer to see no measure enacted rather than to have an objectionable act merely for expediency.

The committee pointed out that Senate leaders had advised them that no merger bill about which there is any great controversy would likely be passed by the Senate at this session.

The street railways need the merger more than the public now, the people's counsel pointed out, and it is up to the former to make whatever concessions are necessary to effect enactment of legislation.

Frederic Towers Weds College Girl

Capital Attorney Marries Miss Dorothy Close in Surprise Ceremony.

Frederic N. Towers, 34, prominent Washington lawyer, and Miss Dorothy B. Close, daughter of Justice Frederic P. Close, of the New York State Supreme Court, and a senior at Trinity College, were married yesterday in a surprise ceremony.

The wedding was in the rectory of Immaculate Conception Church. It was performed by the Rev. Francis J. Hurney. The couple left immediately for Florida. They will make their home at 1876 Redwood place.

The permission and blessings of Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, were given the couple. Mr. Towers is the son of the late David I. Towers, of this city. His first wife, who was Miss Francis Trenholm Capers, died about ten years ago.

$22,294 GIVEN 1,242 FAMILIES IN MONTH

$9,173 Is Spent on Jobless Relief in Same Period by Associated Charities.

Relief funds totaling $22,294 were given to 1,242 families during November, it was reported at yesterday's meeting of the board of managers of the Associated Charities.

An analysis of the expenditures of the society showed that the major relief problem was unemployment. To this end $9,173 was expended.

Relief of the sick was next in importance. In this connection 203 families received $5,067. Families of widows, 127 in number, were aided to the extent of $2,794.

Unmarried mothers, 34 in number, received a total of $435, while 70 elderly persons drew $831, or approximately $12 each.

Desertion and nonsupport swelled the total in the dependency group, as 191 families, in need because of that reason, received $3,529.

During the course of the month the visitors of the society made 4,772 calls and held 2,679 interviews. Mr. Clarence Phelps Dodge presided in the absence of the chairman, Dr. Frederic W. Perkins.

The descent into place of the distant stone will be made visible to those present at the main ceremony.

G. W. TROUBADOURS SCORE BRILLIANT HIT IN MUSICAL COMEDY

"Oh Say! Can't You See?" Opens 4-Performance Run at McKinley High.

Catchy music and a chorus that possesses everything a great many professional ones lack combine to make "Oh, Say! Can't You See?" this year's presentation of the Troubadours of George Washington University, which opened last night at McKinley High School Auditorium, a production that not only the participants, but the entire student body as well, may well be proud of.

The comedy is of the usual campus variety, distributed by two comedians who are apparently inspired by the now rarely seen slapstick movies. The story follows the musical comedy tradition that the plot doesn't matter.

What does matter, however, is that this show was prepared in its entirety by an organization of young men and women; that it shines with the courage of youth not afraid to experiment, and that it is all carried off with a sincerity that should renew faith in the younger generation.

Trio Stand Out.

Three members of the cast stand out: Ruth Molyneaux, with golden hair and a golden voice; Leonard Stevens, handsome, well poised, who should have been given a greater opportunity to sing, and Audrey Edmonds, petite and animated, with a more natural stage presence than any one else in the production.

Joseph Danzansky, billed as the comedian, warms to his part toward the end of the first scene, and scores heavily with his gawkiness and weird hand manipulations. He is supported by Gerald Sickler, who, in the last act, makes up for his painfully self-conscious acting during the first part of the show.

The theme song, bearing the title of the production, starts the feet tapping.

Love Song Makes Hit.

Probably the most impressive sequence is the moonlit, romantic setting, in which the languorous "Oh, My Darling, I Love You," is given by a crooner, Craig Morris, accompanied by a whistler, Catherine Kramer, and Miriam Fisher on the xylophone. George Wells, who takes the part of a cub reporter—notebook and everything—is delightful with Miss Edmonds in "Sweet Julia" and several other numbers.

One of the high comedy moments is contributed by William Claudy, in a character part, and Mr. Sickler, singing "I'm a (Hic-Hic) Country Gentleman." There are a dozen or more other numbers sung by the principals, all melodious and adorned with clever lines.

Daniel C. Beattie is responsible for the book, music and lyrics; Dean Longfellow and a staff of assistants, for the settings; Ruth Warren for the costumes and Ralph Kennedy for the dance routines. The cast was coached by Dennis E. Connell.

Personnel of Chorus.

The chorus is composed of the following:

The production will be repeated tonight, tomorrow night and Saturday night.

BARRY CONNECTION IN HUNDRED CASE IS SEEN IN POLICE QUIZ

Meanwhile, Coroner's Jury Will Meet Today in Seigel Killing.

While headquarters detectives are investigating the possible connection of Joseph Thomas Barry with regard to receiving certain property stolen from Washington homes by Kenneth Hundred, now incarcerated in Baltimore on numerous housebreaking charges, a coroner's jury at 11:30 a. m. today will decide whether or not to hold Barry in the fatal shooting of Israel Seigel, 28, of 224 Tenth street southeast, in the rear of 3130 Eleventh street northwest Tuesday afternoon.

Capt. B. W. Thompson, assistant chief of detectives, last night said investigation has revealed the possibility that Barry may have received some of the $20,000 loot taken from various residences and apartments here by Hundred during the last few months. However, Capt. Thompson said no definite evidence has as yet been found that would warrant placing any charges against Barry.

More Information Expected.

The investigation will be continued today and the assistant chief of detectives said additional information is expected to be uncovered within the next 24 hours.

A great deal of the large amount of stolen property has been recovered during the past week through the cooperation of Washington and Baltimore detectives, Hundred and his wife, Mrs. Frances Hundred. Much more is expected to be recovered within the next two days.

According to detectives of the Homicide Squad working on the shooting case, Barry, who is 43 years old and lives at 1325 Massachusetts avenue northwest, shot Seigel as he was sitting in a truck in the rear of a grocery store, as the result of a jealous feud over Mrs. Ruth Goebel, mother of a 6-year-old son and a 10-year-old adopted daughtre.

Tells of Quarrel.

Mrs. Goebel told detectives she had lived for a short time at Barry's address, but that she left there Saturday and took her children to Alexandria following a quarrel with Bafry over Seigel. She said she had known Barry for a long time, and that her husband, whom she left shortly after the birth of her son, lives in New York. She said that she had known Seigel for only a short time.

About four hours after the shooting occurred, while detectives were investigating, Barry, accompanied by his attorney, Cedric Johnson, walked in police headquarters and surrendered. On advice from his lawyer, he refused to discuss the incident.

Seigel, who was removed to Garfield Hospital immediately after the shooting, died several hours later.

Jewelry and clothing valued at about $250 was reported stolen from the apartment of Francis Keegan at 1229 Twelfth street northwest yesterday morning. Lone Robber Gets $30 In Grocery Store Holdup

Forcing the manager into a rear room and ordering him to stay there for ten minutes, a lone robber yesterday afternoon rifled the cash register of the Sanitary Grocery store at 1000 O street northwest.

Carl D. Roper, the manager, estimated the loss at between $30 and $35. He said the robber was a well-dressed young man, and had a small caliber revolver. Roper was unable to say whether the man left in a car.

KNIGHT TO SPEAK

SIR WILLMOTT LEWIS, Washington correspondent of the London Times, who will be the principal speaker at the Board of Trade meeting tonight at the Willard Hotel. He will discuss current international affairs. A buffet supper will be served.

SPEAKER DOUBTS U.S REVIVAL OF BUSINESS

Lauck Tells Optimists Trade Must Be Assured Profits and High Wages.

The Optimist Club was told yesterday by W. Jett Lauck, economist, that the Government has no policy or program which can be counted upon to bring an early business revival. He spoke at a luncheon meeting at the Hamilton Hotel.

He said that a business revival depends on the assurance of business that it can sell its goods at a profit and upon increased purchasing power through more employment, shorter hours and higher wage levels.

This can only be accomplished, he declared, by means of a Federal system of control boards, which would regulate prices and production within reasonable limits.

The Government must reverse its position, he said, and recognize that it is unrestricted competition which has been largely responsible for the present depression, and that in assuring business men of an opportunity to produce their gooods and sell them at a profit, credit can be put to work, industry revived and employment stabilized.

Red Cross Office Is Closed.

The roll call department of the local chapter of the American Red Cross closed its headquarters at 709 Fourteenth street northwest yesterday. The department will be located at the Chapter House, 1730 E street northwest.

SEMINAR SPEAKER SEES RACE INJURY WITH FOOD SLUMP

Miss Fisher Says Depression Will Affect Children in Later Years.

The specter of a weakened race due to the undernourishment of children during extended depression periods in this country was said to be a just cause for alarm, in a discussion at the first of a series of seminars in social and economic planning sponsored last night by the American Association of University Women at their local headquarters.

Miss Katherine Ward Fisher, member of the Family Endowment Society, presented a paper in which she made mention of the fact that a number of persons who were deprived of proper nourishment in European food blockades during the World War had suffered permanent physical injury.

Bad After Effect.

Depression periods make impossible the inclusion of certain necessary foodstuffs in children's diet and the after effects may blight a large number of lives, she stated.

A possible solution suggested was the maintenance of children by industry or Government during economic upheaval. This obligation, it was stated, should be the first charge against industry.

Economists Present.

The seminar conducted yesterday by Dr. Leifur Magnusson, director of the local office of the International Labor Organization, and assisted by Dr. John Donaldson, professor of economics of George Washington University; Dr. Mordecai Ezekial, associate economst of the Federal Farm Board, and Miss Marie Obenauer, was participated in by a number of university and Government economists.

Meetings of the group will be held at short intervals, and social and economic problems will be discussed. Dr. Martha MacLear, vice president of the American Association of University Women, is arranging the programs.
